Valuable Babies
More and Bigger War
Railroads Plan Flying

LONDON IS interested in a baby girl, Alice Seabrooke, aged three weeks, weight one pound, ten ounces. She has gained four ounces since birth, was fed by a fountain pen dropper at first, now eats from a spoon and is well.

The Spartans and later barbarians would have shed such a child aside as not worth rearing. But your sickly baby is often your best, too much brain monopolizing the blood supply.

Voltaire was puny, sickly baby, with fits, and would have died had not his mother's father confessor given him especial, intelligent care.

Newton, great mathematician in history, weighed less than two pounds at birth, and was called dull by his teacher in arithmetic. Newton told his mother he did not think the mathematical problems were intended seriously, as he could do them all instantly "in his head," and proved it. Take care of your sickly child, it is probably your best.

Marshal Foch predicts another World War in fifteen or twenty years, bigger and worse than any, affecting men, women and children, everywhere on earth, and fought in the air.

Airplanes, the Marshal believes, will fight not singly, or in pairs, but "in serried masses."

Not a pleasant prospect, but sometimes human beings develop common sense, when you least expect it. Somewhere, in each of the nations, there must be intelligence and influence enough to save the world from such a fate.

President Coolidge will be interested in the Foch statement, knowing that Foch is not exactly a theorist in war.

If a World War in the air is coming, would it not be a good idea to get ready for such a war, even though estimable old ladies, male and female, object to war preparation?

Why not take less interest in other nations' affairs, Britain's cruisers, French submarines, and concentrate on giving what it needs to this country?

Five important railroads consult the Interstate Commerce Commission about adding aircraft to other transportation. That's encouraging. Railroads have always believed that the government does not know how to do much of anything, and may prove it by distancing government in the air.

William H. Vanderbilt—he and his great mare, Maud S., have long been dead—was asked to invest in New York's city elevated railroad system. He replied: "Americans do many foolish things, but will never be fools enough to ride in the air."

He little thought that his New York Central Railroad, now controlled by George F. Baker, long past eighty, would eventually take to flying.

In a few years, surface railCONTINUED ON PAGE 14, COLUMN 5.

GOWNS GIRL DIDN'T TAKE

Mrs. Dorothy Livingstone of Norton, holding frocks and coat that Gladys Lincoln, 16, left behind in her room when she fled, clad in a nightgown.

Search for sixteen-year-old Gladys Lincoln, mysteriously missing from her home in Norton, centred in Greater Boston today following her second disappearance after a visit to a sister in Cambridge.

Efforts were also made to locate her cousin, nineteen-year-old Elliott Drew, of North Easton, in whose auto the girl was last seen. With young Drew she had taken the Cambridge sister to a physician's office on Commonwealth avenue, and with young Drew she then dropped from sight of her relatives and friends.

Drew was supplied with a large sum of money. According to one relative he had a bank book showing $1,000 in deposits when he left home, supposedly to go to a camp. He had just started two weeks' vacation and told his mother he was going to the camp for that time.

At first, because of a torn night gown and spots on the floor believed to be bloodstains, and the fact that a ladder was found at the front of

ANTI-SALOON LEADERS SAY MELLON WANTED A 'LIBERAL FLOW OF RUM'

By EDWIN J. CLAPP

Copyright, 1927, by the Boston Evening American, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction either in whole or in part prohibited. The first instalment of this [illegible] published in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The secret records of the Anti-Saloon League of America, which have been obtained by the Boston Evening American in co-operation with the New York American, and are here given to the public for the first time, reveal its astounding activities in bringing its influence to bear upon the President of the United States and the administrative officers of the government.

The official minutes of its executive committee disclose how brazenly the officials of the league have worked secretly at Washington to obtain and maintain control over all the prohibition enforcement machinery of the nation.

In these secret papers are recorded the ultimatums that the League served on President Harding and President Coolidge, as well as various officials of the Government. From the records uncovered these facts are brought out:

While the Volstead Law was being enacted, the executive committee met in 1919 and named Wayne B. Wheeler as overlord at Washington to have the League's policy obeyed by the national administration.

The League was able to force its own appointment for the first prohibition commissioner, Roy A. Haynes. Wheeler reports to his bosses:

"We had the assurance from the White House every few days that

NAB 1, FIND SUITCASE IN HUNT FOR SLAYERS

Police found today in a room occupied by three brothers in Charlestown a suitcase stolen from the laundry of Wing Lee, who is believed to have been robbed by the youths who killed Patrolman Harris B. MacInnes.

Waiting in hiding, they took into custody, a short time afterward, one of three brothers who is said to have occupied the room, which is in a Sullivan street boarding house.

The young man was taken to police headquarters for questioning, while search was launched for his brother.

WOMAN GAVE TIP.

The finding of the stolen suitcase, police declared, was the most important development since the hunt for the slayers of the policeman began a week ago. The discovery came through a tip from the landlady.

Acting on another tip inspectors also went to Revere, where according to a mysterious telephone message, they were told they could find some of the stolen laundry in a central rooming house.

The authorities working on the MacInnes murder believe it is significant that one of the three Charlestown brothers, whose affairs occupied their attention today, is named Walter. As the two slayers fled from the scene after MacInnes was shot down, persons nearby heard one shout, "Wait for me, Walter, you got me into this."

Captain William Livingston, Inspector Joseph Cavagnaro and Special Officer Bonner, who took the young men to headquarters declared, however, that they accused him and his brothers of nothing, as yet, but were extremely anxious to question all three.

ONE DISAPPEARS.

One of the other two brothers is said to be in Boston, while the third brother is said to have disappeared.

Police have been on the lookout for the brothers for several days, according to Captain Livingston. Search centred on School street, where, it was believed, one or more of them lived until recently. One of the brothers is said to be a navy deserter.

Search for them went on steadily, while other cities were being run down, and the "tip" from the Sullivan street landlady gave the police the necessary information to lead them on the right trail.

City Councillor Thomas H. Green of Charlestown asked Mayor Nichols today to put an order before the City Council, calling for a $1,000 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of the killers.

MYSTERY SCREAMS IN HUNT FOR MOTHER OF 9

Dudley, July 11.—Screams heard by a neighbor on the night that Mrs. Henry Willis, 35-year-old mother of nine children, disappeared from her lonely farmhouse, strengthened the police theory that she was the victim of foul play.

As a result State and local police at the head of a large posse of citizens and Boy Scouts today renewed their search for her body in the ponds and dense shrubbery of Dudley Hill.

A farmer who lives close to the Willis homestead told authorities that on the night before the Fourth of July, which was the night the woman disappeared, he heard screams piercing the night.

The screams continued for about ten minutes, he said.

The husband, Henry Willis, employed as a farmhand in the vicinity

Train In Crash Hurls Man's Body Into Next County

Geneva, N. Y., July 11 (I.N.S.)—Failure of the driver to see the danger in time was believed responsible today for a crash between a motor truck and a passenger train at a New York Central railroad crossing near here which cost three lives.

A peculiar development of the crash was that one of the bodies was hurled 130 feet across the county line from Ontario into Seneca County, necessitating an inquest by the coroners of both counties.

One tire of the machine was found 700 feet from the scene of the accident.

DIG WAY TO $800

Robbers early today tunneled their way through a brick wall into the Liggett drugstore at No. 781 Dudley street, Dorchester, dynamited the safe in the rear of the prescription department and stole $800.

A few minutes later, two men discovered lurking in a nearby alleyway were chased by Patrolmen John J. Geogehan and Joseph Deady, who captured and locked up a man who gave the name of Joseph Butler, accused of being a suspicious character.

Shots fired by Geogehan aroused the neighborhood and brought out a score or more who joined in the pursuit.

Butler was taken at revolver's point. Searched, he was found to have in his pockets $400 in bills. Later he was taken to police headquarters, photographed and fingerprinted.

The robbery was not only one of the boldest, but was one of the cleverest in Boston in several years, the police said. Planned by men who knew the store thoroughly, the crime also required patience in the tunneling through a thick wall, and must have begun with an entrance effected Saturday night late, or early Sunday morning, the police declared.

Climbing a ladder to a roof, the robbers gained access to the F. W. Woolworth 5 and 10-cent store at

FREE STATE HEADS ARE GUARDED; FEAR OF CIVIL WAR SPREADS IN ERIN

London, July 11 (I.N.S.)—Two arrests have been made in Ireland in connection with the assassination of Vice-President Kevin O'Higgins, according to a Dublin dispatch today to the Evening News.

Advices from Dublin said the country was in a high state of excitement and that the police everywhere were active.

Dublin, July 11 (I.N.S.).—A country-wide search was under way through Ireland today for the assassins of Kevin O'Higgins, Vice-President and Foreign Minister of the Irish Free State, who was shot to death yesterday when walking from his home to mass at Black Rock, near Dublin.

The assassins, who occupied an automobile, escaped.

The Irish police have been stopping all motor cars that might lead to clews.

MAKES FACE AT WIFE IN COURT TRAGEDY CASE

In the same room, where, ten days ago, tragedy stalked and a mother, after pouring out her bitterness against a daughter, dropped dead, the child custody case brought by Dr. Joseph Clifford, Dorchester dentist, against E. Dorchester divorced wife, was resumed today in Suffolk Probate Court.

And the case had been in progress for only a few minutes when Judge McCosle, presiding, was complained to that the dentist on the stand, was grimacing at his wife.

"Sure, I was grimacing. I made a face," the dentist replied when Judge McCosle queried him. The Judge then warned against further such changes of facial expression for the benefit of Mrs. Loretta Clifford.

The dentist, when he stepped on the stand to wage his own fight for custody of three-year-old Marjorie, spoke out and gave notice that he intended to answer all questions, no matter what they were. He addressed his counsel and said he wanted no objections.

EX-WIFE EYES DENTIST.

His divorced wife, the attack against whom by her now dead mother, Mrs. Margaret Fallon, startled all in the courtroom at the previous session, eyed the dentist intently from the centre of the group of men and women expected to be her witnesses.

Preceding the dentist briefly on the stand had been Mrs. Florence Yoder, sister of Mrs. Clifford, whose bitterness against her sister in the earlier session had been almost as marked as that of her mother.

DIES FOR IRELAND
Kevin O'Higgins, victim of assassination. He was called the "Mussolini of Ireland" and was regarded as the strongest man in the Free State ranks. He faced his end calmly, saying, "I die for Erin!"

IRISH LEADER PREY OF ASSASSINS
Picture shows how Kevin O'Higgins, vice-president of the Irish Free State, was shot down on way to church in Dublin. Three killers fired shots, while two comrades waited in nearby auto. All of the assassins escaped. In his dying words O'Higgins forgave the slayers. Civil war is feared as result of outrage.

MAY COME BACK
Richard Mulcahy, former leader of Free State army, who may be recalled into service as result of threatened civil war, following murder of O'Higgins. He is an Irish idol.

IRISH OFFICIALS GUARDED AGAINST MORE KILLING

Dublin was in a fever of excitement today. Special arrangements were made to guard the other ministers of the Irish Free State government.

Fears were felt that the assassins planned wholesale murders and that they might strike again at any moment.

An official account of the assassination in the morning papers showed that five men were involved. The motor car which they occupied had been stolen in Dublin on Saturday night.

Two of the men acted as "look outs" while the other three did the actual shooting.

The body of O'Higgins lay in state today in the Mansion House. After a mass in St. Andrews Church, Wednesday, there will be a public funeral. Burial will take place in Glasnevin Cemetery, where many leading figures in Irish history are buried, among them Parnell and Daniel O'Connell.

President Cosgrave and Governor-General Healy were among the first to view the body today. Thousands of others stood long hours in line waiting for a chance to pay their respects to the slain leader.

CIVIL WAR FEARED.

As a result of the assassination Ireland today practically prepared for a new civil war.

With the entire country aflame as a result of the slaying of O'Higgins, known as the "Irish Mussolini," an armed clash between Free Staters and Republicans seemed certain.

Out of the confusion of charge and counter-charge, blame for the killing laid onto the Republicans and denial by them of guilt, there crawled the red spectre of new warfare, recalling the dreadful days when the assassination of Michael Collins plunged Ireland into bloody fighting.

The feeling is all the more bitter as it is generally admitted that O'Higgins, vice-president of the Free State council, Minister of Justice and Foreign Affairs, was the strongest figure in Irish life—the strongest man and most hated man in Ireland, as he has been often called.

Other factors tending to inflame the situation are his remarkable coolness after being shot down, his reference to Collins in his dying words, the gentleness and chivalry of his last statement in which he freely forgave his assassins. These features have become rallying cries for the Free State supporters.

KILLED FROM AMBUSH.

The murder of O'Higgins has suddenly and sharply brought to the fore again the hatreds of the two parties, now seemingly stronger and more bent on one another's destruction than ever.

As in the case of Collins, O'Higgins' murderers lay in wait for him. As he was walking alone from his home at Black Rock, a short distance from Dublin, to mass, an automobile pulled up beside him and three men pumped bullets into him. The assassins escaped the police.

As he lay on the road mortally wounded O'Higgins gasped out: "I forgive them all."

O'Higgins retained consciousness and to those about him said: Please Turn to Page 4, Column 5.

Had a Rabbit's Foot, But His Luck Was Poor in Murder

Newark, N. J., July 11 (A.P.).—The left hind foot of a rabbit failed to exercise its "good luck" charm for Harry Scott, negro, and he was held by police today charged with the murder on July 3 of Louisa Robinson.

Scott fled to Philadelphia immediately after the murder, but returned yesterday with another girl, certain of his security, he told the police, so long as he carried the rabbit foot. He is charged with having shot the woman four times during a quarrel.

the committee is hearing evidence that will mean life or death for their husband and father.

Whether or not Mrs. Sacco had been sent for by the committee or come on her own accord she would not reveal, but her dark eyes only left the door of the Council chamber to watch the child seated at her side.

Mail from all parts of the globe continued to pour into the Governor's office today. Two 25 registered packages received late Saturday were a part of the 2,500,000 signatures to a petition from France asking that Sacco and Vanzetti be either released or given a new trial.

Among them were such names as ex-Premier Joseph Caillaux, Romaine Rolland, Henri Barbeau and 200 members of the Paris bar. This is said to be only a portion of the names on the way to America from France.

SAFE-CRACKERS GET $800

No. 779 Dudley street by breaking a window. From the upper floor they made their way to the cellar, and from this vantage point tunneled their way into the basement of the drugstore.

Returning with their loot, they dropped $30 in bills on the 5 and 10 cent store floor; this was found by police searchers later. The police also recovered $150 in coin, which had been thrown into a yard off Virginia street, down which the chase after one of the fugitives had led.

It was Geogehan's second night on the beat. Observing two men, emerging from an alleyway, he told them to stop. They not only failed to obey but quickened their step.

"Halt!" cried the policeman.

The men started running. Then they parted, Deady joined in, chasing the man whom he later arrested as Butler. Geogehan continued after the second man, who tried to draw a revolver from his hip pocket as he ran.

At this, Geogehan fired twice. The fleeing man apparently thought better of his plan, took his hand from his pocket and made off at top speed. He finally dodged through a yard and escaped.

Three years ago the Liggett store was broken into in precisely the same manner as today. A tunnel was dug at that time from the adjoining Woolworth building and police are inclined to believe that the same thieves were guilty of both jobs.

That the thieves split their loot immediately was indicated by the fact that empty money bags were found in the alleyway back of the store.

the house leading to the second floor where the girl slept, the police thought she had been kidnaped.

The girl's appearance in Cambridge caused the police to discard the theory of crime entirely. But they continued their attempt to solve the puzzle of why the girl had left home, and was staying away.

That the girl was still alive was the word given out by her sister, Mrs. Idella Smith, of No. 48 Dover street, North Cambridge.

Mrs. Smith today told authorities when the girl and Drew arrived at her home Saturday the girl had a new blue silk dress which her cousin had given her. The girl donned this dress before she and Drew took Mrs. Smith to the physician's office.

At Drew's home it was said the youth had been staying on Cape Cod over the week-end, but was expected to return to his work at North Easton today.

U. S. CAPTAIN ESCAPES FROM CHINESE PIRATES

London, July 11 (A.P.).—A Reuter dispatch from Shanghai says that Captain Fisher, American master of the steamer Chichuen, who was captured by pirates two weeks ago, reached Ichang safely Saturday, after having escaped from his captors.

The dispatch says that Fisher, who was held for $2,000 ransom, refloated the Chichuen which had gone aground about thirty miles from Ichang. The advices said that the Chinese owner of the vessel was still in the hands of the pirates.

Fearing the comment that usually goes with a December and May romance, Miss Lucas, 74, West Newton lumber dealer, and Miss Dorothy May Anderson, 19, a clerk in the assessors' department of Newton, armed with a waiver of the five-day law and a marriage license, have disappeared. Whether or not the ceremony has been performed would not be revealed by the family of either.

Miss Anderson resigned her position Saturday. Just before closing time Saturday she and Lucas filed marriage intentions with City Clerk FFrank M. Grant. They then went to the office of Clerk of Courts Francis W. Sprague, who, after communicating with Judge William F. Bacon, gave the waiver of the five-day law. They hurried back to City Hall and obtained the marriage license. Then announced they were going away.

RESUME HUNT FOR WOMAN

and who admitted he hadn't lived with his wife for some time, was questioned by State Detective Edward J. McCarthy of Worcester and Chief George Reynolds of Dudley.

CHECK UP ON VEHICLES.

He repeated his previous story that she was the victim of a strange religious mania and subject to hallucinations, but he could throw no light on the case.

Search today for the woman's body was conducted over a wider area than previously. Although the woods were wet and the going unpleasant, the Boy Scouts beat through the underbrush and examined old buildings and wells within five miles of the Willis home.

State Detective McCarthy today devoted some time to investigating a mysterious telephone call to the home of Mrs. Clarence Jacobs, nearest neighbor to the Willis home, last Friday night.

CAN'T TRACE CALL.

The message came from another city, and when Mrs. Jacobs did not answer the call, another neighbor on the same line lifted her receiver. A woman's voice asked if it was Mrs. Jacobs, and when told that it was not, the strange woman broke the connection. The authorities believe the call may have been from Mrs. Willis and that she called Mrs. Jacobs to inquire about her children.

The telephone company has been unable to find from what city the call came.

The theory she may have hidden of six.

in an isolated shack and foraged for food at night has been discarded, for she would have been recognized by farmers who round up stray cattle at night.

The story told by Dorothy, seventeen, eldest of the nine children, contradicted the one told by her father in several important aspects.

Her mother, Dorothy said, never ventured out of the house after dark, but instead, bolted the doors and barricaded the windows every night before retiring.

On the night she vanished, according to her children, the mother tiptoed into the room of one the girls and placed her alarm clock at the foot of the child's bed. The children declared they did not see their mother leave.

Police investigation has revealed that Willis lived and worked at the farmhouse of a half-sister, Mrs. Lucy Babcock, not far from the Willis home.

FIGHT TO SAVE BROTHER OF EX-MAYOR

Four men convicted in the so-called Chelsea rum ring, including Thomas Quigley, brother of former Mayor Lawrence F. Quigley of Chelsea, must begin on July 21 serving their sentences imposed in Federal Court.

For more than a year the four defendants have fought to carry their case to the Supreme Court of the United States, but following a decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Assistant United States District Attorney John V. Spaulding today ordered the men into court on July 31 to begin their sentences.

The four men are: Thomas Quigley, former Chelsea police inspector, sentenced to eighteen months in Atlanta prison and fined $700; Edward W. Ibbetson, former sergeant of Crelsea police, eighteen months in Atlanta and $500 fine; Ned O'Keefe, fifteen months in Atlanta, and Edward Carlin, eighteen months in Atlanta.

The latter two were designated during the trial as "bag men" or collectors for the rum ring.

All four were convicted of conspiracy to violate the liquor laws. At their first trial the jury disagreed.

Former Mayor Quigley, who was a co-defendant, was not convicted, both juries disagreeing on him.

While the Court of Appeals denied the appeal of the defendants, their attorneys will continue action to carry the case to the Supreme Court, where a writ of certoriodi is being sought, which, if granted, would set sentences aside.

LEGION URGES CITY CONTROL OF AIRPORT

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, conqueror of the wastes of the North Atlantic, will come to Boston, probably early in August, to aid the Massachusetts Commission on Aviation to establish a progressive policy for development of aviation.

This announcement was made today by the members of the commission who met informally at the State House, preparatory to the organization meeting next week.

Senator George K. Pond of Greenfield, one of the most active members of the commission, is on vacation and was not at today's meeting. The commission agreed the post of chairman of the body should be tendered to him and it is understood he will accept.

The commission met behind closed doors, and no effort was made to perfect permanent organization. The commission was assured that Colonel Lindbergh had agreed to come to Boston and confer when the commission was ready.

WANT CITY RULE.

Creation of a State Department of Aviation was urged at today's meeting by the American Legion.

The Legion also urged development of the Boston airport and its control by the city.

All recommendations made by the Legion are in full accord with the improvements which the Boston Evening American has been advocating in its drive for a "Bigger, Better and Busier Boston Airport."

Members of the Massachusetts commission meeting today for the first time were Representative Thomas R. Bateman of Winchester, Representative Allan B. MacGregor of Haverhill, Joseph W. Powell, chairman of the Maritime Association, Boston Chamber of Commerce; Gardiner H. Fiske of Weston, chairman of the Boston airport committee; Paul J. Bortelson, East Boston, and Charles F. Taylor, Newton, of the Institute of Technology.

GIRL CLAIMS TO HAVE ALIBI FOR ZONNA

A girl friend of Tony Zonna, held by the Boston police in connection with the search for the slayer of Maybelle Matheson, today came to his defense with a claim of a perfect alibi for him.

She said she was ready to tell District Attorney Foley that Zonna was with her on the night the Matheson girl was slain. She said she might give her information to the District Attorney or the police today. Meanwhile, the police planned to grill Zonna again at headquarters.

Zonna's girl friend is Miss Marion Riley, 15, of No. 121 Liberty road, West Somerville. She declares that on the night of Jan. 21, the night of the murder, Zonna met her (Miss Riley), at Julian and Judson streets, in Roxbury, at 6:15. The Matheson girl is supposed to have been killed in West Roxbury, several miles away, at 8:50.

Miss Riley said:

"Tony worked that day, for he called me at noon and told me to arrange to meet his uncle, Thomas Taurasso, and Anthony Covino, a friend of East Boston, at Dover street and Blue Hill avenue at 6:30. When he met me at 6:15 he was all dressed and ready for the party."

"Tony and I walked to Dover street and Blue Hill avenue and stood on the corner until Covino and Tony's uncle, who owns the bootblacking privileges at the Quincy House and Elks Hotel, came along in Covino's car and picked us up. Tony may have been a minute or two late, but I did not have to wait any longer than that.

"The four of us went in Covino's automobile to the apartment of John and Sue Clifford at No. 24 Vine street, where we left about 6:45 o'clock, round the Covino's house in Paris street, East Boston, where the party was going to be.

EX-CHIEF QUINN IS PAROLED

Salem, July 11 (A.P.).—William J. Quinn, ex-chief of police of Swampscott, who has served at Salem jail seven months of a 15-month sentence imposed by the Federal court, for violating the liquor laws while chief, was paroled today by order of the federal authorities at Washington.

He was released from jail and left for his home in Swampscott.

PAL TO 'SQUEAL' THAT 'BOSTON BILLY' SLEW

Mineola, N. Y., July 11 (I.N.S.).—Arthur Barry, confessed gem thief serving twenty-five years, was brought here from Sing Sing prison today to "squeal" on his former pal, "Boston Billy" Williams.

He accuses Williams of participating in scores of gem robberies in Westchester County and Long Island and named him as the slayer of Police Sergeant John Harrison of Scarsdale.

With announcement that invitations have been sent to society folk to visit "Boston Billy" in jail comes the report that a woman may reveal a "super-Raffles" in Long Island's burglary trust.

Included among those whom "Boston Billy" will "receive" are the Livermores, Thomas Hitchcock, Mrs. Marion B. Elliott and James S. Phipps.

Three women have been found who had appointments with him the day he was arrested. One expected to lunch with him, another was to see him in the afternoon and a third in the evening.

aircraft registration granted by the Federal government be recognized by Massachusetts as sufficient authority to entitle pilot or aircraft to operating privileges in this Commonwealth, no further State license or registration being required.

(b) That where a pilot or aircraft is to operate solely within the bounds of the Commonwealth only a Massachusetts license or registration is required as at present.

That inasmuch as the Federal government has adopted the policy of developing airways, leaving the responsibility for terminal and main airports to the municipalities, Massachusetts shall assign to municipalities development of their airports.

The Legion also made vigorous recommendations for the development of Boston airport as follows:

CITY CONTROL.

In accordance with the above general policy, "Boston Airport" be turned over to the City of Boston. (Favor continuance of present lease arrangement with War Department.)

Boston Airport should be enlarged by grading and surfacing of the extent filled area, and hangars should be moved to southwest corner. (Boston to do this work in consideration for receiving control.)

Airport be lighted for night flying.

Facilities for getting to and from airport be improved. (Resurfacing of roads, extension of street car lines, abolishing grade crossings of Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn (re-ka.)

"That the Commonwealth establish a department of aviation to have general supervision of aviation matters in State, other than those belonging to the military establishment. Department shall be administered by a commissioner who will be a qualified pilot," is the way the major recommendation of the American Legion reads.

DUTIES OF CHIEF.

The recommendation as to a State Department of Aviation sets forth that "for the present and immediate future a pilot must be chosen as commissioner" and that his duties shall include:

Examination of pilots for State license; inspection and testing of aircraft for State registration; periodic visits by airplane to the air fields for the purposes of supervision and inspection runways, planes and pilots; maintenance of an office at the State House which shall be a centre of information and assistance in aeronautical matters, selection, examination and appointment of necessary deputy aviation inspectors: to serve as a co-ordinating agency for municipalities, State and Federal governments in aviation; in general to represent the interests of aviation in the Commonwealth and of the Commonwealth in aviation.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Newport Society Goes on Daily Round No Matter What the Weather

QUITE REGARDLESS OF THE weather man's contribution to the day, Newport society goes its accustomed way and, rain or shine, puts in its appearance at Bailey's Beach. Otherwise the social round is not complete. The merest suggestion of lifting rain clouds and a flicker of sunlight, and out come the sleek and shining motors to toot their lordly way to the portals that so efficiently guard the sands whereon society in the ultimate disports itself. Even yesterday's "Scotch mist" failed to keep the regulars away from the noonday rendezvous.

MRS. GEORGE VON L. MEYER, Jr., of Charles River Village and Hamilton, parked a smart motor in the enclosure over which Officer Buckley maintains such efficient dominion. Mrs. Meyer is the Newport guest of another Boston matron of high degree, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, and each has trinity turned out for the beach. Mrs. Ames wore a matrix blue silken frock, with furred coat of golden tan and small hat to match. Mrs. Meyer's middy costume oyster white, coat frock and hat of the colorless hue.

JUST BEFORE MESDAMES Ames and Meyer arrived, Mrs. William Woodward flashed up in her shining coupe to make a brief beach appearance. Of a striking resemblance are these two sisters, Mrs. Ames the former Edith Cryder and Mrs. Woodward the Elsie Cryder of the "Cryder triplets" so popular with the beaux of past days. Mrs. Woodward wore an outfit done in the snugly fitting worsteds of two-toned tan and looked as girlish as though she were in truth her own daughter. The Ames and Woodward establishments are two of Newports most important.

WITH AN EYE FOR COLOR Miss Mary Ames, daughter of the aforementioned Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, seen to it that her chapeau and her motor blend in tone. Her roadster with its deep vermilion and her small felt hat with its deep rose hit brighten the green stretches of Bellevue Avenue. Between the Ames villa, the Casino, and Bailey's, Miss Mary takes her gladsome way, always with a train of admirers. Miss Romaine, Bristow, Boyd is the daughter of the William B. Bristows was smartest of the smart in flaming Quirt, this the outfit, of simplest line but of darling color.

SPEAKING OF BRIGHT colors on Newport's famous avenue there's nothing brighter its whole multi-millionaire length than the awnings at "Beaulieu" where the General Cornelius Vanderbilts are domiciled for the Summer. Lacking the stately grandure that gives the "Breakers" its English ancestral air. Beaulieu makes up the lack with a flare of color, bunting red awnings against brick walls is nothing if not eye arresting. However, it all adds to the amazement of tourists as he gazes awesomely at the mansions of the very rich.

NEWPORT HARBOR HAS A bit of departed air, since so many of the major yachts are on the Eastern Yacht Club's cruise and have not yet made port from Provincetown. The Horace Binney's "Queen Mab" is or rather has been sailing with old friends in the Eastern fleet, and so has Charles L. Harding's "Chiora." Now that the Eastern cruise has wound up in Provincetown the Newport fleet will soon be in home waters again.

THE TALL AND STATELY "Aloha" that takes the Arthur Curtiss Jameses all about the world, is in and out of Newport Harbor at the fancy of her owner. This fine black yacht has nosed her way over several of the seven seas during her eighteen years.

NEWPORT'S MORE SERIOUS side finds beautiful expression in the present showing of the Art Association. Contemporary American painters and sculptors have set up their exhibits. Locally, the representation includes Lillian Westcott Hale's portrait, Dudley Murphy's two flower pieces, and Anna Coleman Ladd's small bronze "Willow and Water." Two buildings are filled with art treasures, and about the broad lawns surrounding them are not various garden pieces. Truly, all is not frivolity in Newport, the Hub of the social universe.

186 VICTIMS OF SAXONY FLOOD

Dresden, Saxony, July 11 (A.P.)—Most of Saxony presented a strange scene of wreckage today as relief squads and emergency forces were at work to aid the homeless and alleviate suffering caused by floods following cloudbursts Saturday.

At Bergguishubel, which of the many flooded towns and villages suffered most, the authorities place the known dead at 93.

At least half the populace of Dresden were thrown on the mercy of the elements "when the raging waters washed all before them. The flood situation is acute, as only one provision store was left standing. Relief parties are finding it difficult to get supplies to the scene.

In Lauenstein, in the Gottleuba valley, the devastation extends from 18 to 20 miles. The picturesque Gottleuba Spa was all mud and water today and a death-like silence was everywhere. Before the wreckage of one house, two aged women were incessantly overhauling their pitiful belongings. They lost their entire families and were mad. Their shrill crying continued throughout the night.

AUTOIST APPEALS FINE OF $100 IN ACCIDENT CASE

Fred T. Nugent of Babcock street, Brookline, was fined $100 by Judge Dean in Brighton court, today on the charge of driving away without making himself known after an automobile accident. Mrs. Leona D. Bullens testified that on June 27, on the Beacon street parkway, Nugent's car crashed into her machine, and that she followed Nugent for five or six miles before she succeeded in halting him and learning his identity. A charge of driving so as to endanger the public was dismissed. Nugent appealed the sentence.

FOUND DEAD IN CAMP

Billerica, July 11—Williams Roberts, fifty-four years old, of No. 419 Main street, Charlestown, was found dead in a camp in the Nuttings Lake district yesterday. Medical Examiner Marshall L. Ailing said death was due to natural causes.

FEAR CIVIL WAR OVER KILLING OF O'HIGGINS

"I die for my country. I go to join Michael Collins."

O'Higgins was usually accompanied by a detective, but when starting for the Booterstown Catholic Church he told his escort for the first time in three years to remain at home. He was taken entirely by surprise.

The first shot struck him in the abdomen, but he managed to stagger across the road, where he collapsed. His assailants fired five or more bullets into his head and body before scurrying into their car and driving furiously away.

DICTATES WILL.

The first to reach the wounded Minister were Kinton Fleming, an official of the Ministry of Finance, his brother, and Professor John MacNeill, formerly Minister of Education.

Fleming raised his head and Kevin whispered hoarsely, "They've got me, just as they got my fathers and later. I forgive them. I die in peace with my enemies and my God."

Turning to Professor MacNeill, he said: "There is no hope, but want to dictate my will."

MacNeill knelt on the bloodstained footpath, and in a clear voice O'Higgins dictated his will, leaving everything he possessed to his wife and baby daughter.

The best surgeon in Dublin, called to his home, where he was taken, could do nothing to save his life. Despite his terrible wounds his mind remained clear to the end, and the doctors marveled at his vitality. He embraced his wife and child, and said farewell to scores of friends.

"Kevin, while there's life there's hope," one of them said encouragingly.

"Ah, there is no hope," the Minister declared in his al cynical manner. "But I was always a bit of a dreamer."

A verdict of wilful murder by three persons unknown was returned at the inquest on the killing today.

Testifying at the inquest, Professor MacNeil told how O'Higgins gasped out "I forgive my murderers," and then gave directions for taking charge of his papers.

"He told me," said the professor, "to give a message of love to his wife, to tell her he loved her, that he loved her eternally."

Mrs. O'Higgins was prostrated by the shock of her husband's death and was in a highly nervous state today.

She heard the shots fired at her husband and screamed to send help only for she exclaimed, "Oh, I hope they are not for my poor Kevin," She collapsed when told of the latter's death.

Police believe the assassins may have escaped either into the mountains or by boat out to sea.

HEALY'S NEPHEW.

Kevin O'Higgins was known as the Irish Mussolini, on account of the strong measures he adopted for suppressing the Republican attempt to smash the Free State by force of arms.

A nephew of Governor Tim Healy, he shared the Governor's gift of incisive and bitter speech. Combined with this was a keen, analytical mind and indefatigable will. But for him it is considered doubtful if the Free State could have survived the civil war of 1922.

The dead Minister was always particularly outspoken in his denunciations of the Republicans and the De Valera party in his political speeches, and for this and other reasons was provided with police protection when he went about.

His assassination follows the similar fate of his father, Dr. O'Higgins, who was shot dead by armed raiders in his own home in 1923.

FEARED BOMB.

Kevin O'Higgins and President Cosgrave were attacked last May when they were crossing O'Connell street after addressing a meeting at which they had been hissed by the Republicans. A smoke bomb was thrown, but Brigadier-General Daly, who was walking with them, caught the bomb in his hand and prevented an explosion.

One instance of O'Higgins' inflexible will serves to characterize the man. He was the close friend of Rory O'Connor, who was executed in 1922 as leader of the four courts rising.

The utmost pressure was brought to bear on O'Higgins to have O'Connor reprieved, but after sitting up a whole night deliberating, the minister of justice decided that this was incompatible with his office.

When, after the execution, O'Connor's will was read, it was found that he had left everything of which he was possessed to O'Higgins.

COSGRAVES' STATEMENT.

President Cosgrave issued the following statement:

"Kevin O'Higgins was shot down on the way to mass. This vice-president of the executive council has been struck down by the hand of the assassin.

"In this hour of national loss and national mourning, mindful of the steadfast, heroic figure, the Irish people will not falter.

"Kevin O'Higgins in his dauntless courage and unflinching determination has trodden the path blazed by Michael Collins and Arthur Griffith even unto death. Another great defender of the nation has passed away.

"The Irish people may rest assured that the assassin's bullet will not succeed in terrorizing this country. There are and will be men enheartened by the noble example of Kevin O'Higgins, and they, by continuing by his labors, ready to step into his place and maintain the high tradition of devotion to the welfare and safety of the nation."

London Is Shocked by Assassination of O'Higgins

London, July 11 (A.P.)—Expressions of regret and indignation were heard in London today over the assassination of Kevin O'Higgins.

He had many friends and admirers here, and only last week, returning from Geneva, he visited several British ministers, to whom the news brought that assassination aroused a shock over the death of one recently seen in health and full activity.

A number of prominent British political leaders made statements of regret and admiration, and L. C. M. Amery, secretary for the Dominions, sent the condolences of the government to William T. Cosgrave, head of the Free State Cabinet.

Fears are expressed in some newspapers that the murder may mark the beginning of a fresh period of lawlessness in Ireland, and the renewal of civil war, of this, however, there is no present indication. And as far as reported here, the only excitement in Ireland yesterday arose from indignation over the assassination.

Special dispatches suggest the probability that political motives inspired the assassination. The special correspondent of the Daily Mail who interviewed the recent elections in the Free State, declares: "It is impossible to say from which section came the Vice-President's death warrant. He had enemies throughout all the counties."

GRILL TWO SUSPECTS IN ATTACK ON MAID

Two suspects, one a white man and the other a negro, were grilled at the police today following the discovery of Miss Frances Parzych, a maid, unconscious in the rear of her home on Weldon street, South End. At the City Hospital she was found to be suffering from a fractured skull. Seeking to solve the mystery, the police thought she might have been attacked, or have thrown from a window.

The police held the suspects told conflicting stories. They declared the maid was attacked some time after she went to serving a jail sentence for injuring her by hurling a teacup at her.

AUBURN (ME.) MAN DROWNED IN RIVER

Auburn, Me., July 11.—Abraham Bornstein, 54, of No. 13 Pulsifer street, ended his life by jumping into the Androscoggin Rive. His body was recovered by Marshal Levois and Lucien Parent, both of Lewiston, who were boating on the river.

TWO MORE HELD IN SLAYING OF N. Y. WOMEN

New York, July 11.—As detectives of New York's homicide squad made efforts today to piece together evidence in the double slaying of two women, whose bodies were hacked to pieces and the parts hidden in widely-separated spots in two boroughs, Ludwig Lee, thirty-eight, a former sailor, was subjected to a grilling interrogation. He denies complicity in the crimes, but the police have expressed themselves as confident that they have "the right man."

In the main sewer line leading from the murder house, the sewer workers this morning found four fingers of a woman's right hand. They were believed to be parts of the dismembered bodies.

Two more men have been held as material witnesses.

Kept under constant grilling, Lee declared Miss Brownell proposed marriage to him and he accepted. The proposal occurred May 14, Lee told detectives.

GAVE LEE $800.

Lee said that several months ago Miss Brownell gave him $800 with which he started a restaurant in Brooklyn. This venture proved a failure, he said. The last time she gave him money, he said, was on July 4, when she handed him $10, and he never saw her after that. He said he had known her four years.

The murdered women, Mrs. Elizabeth Brownell, sixty-five, and Mrs. Alfred Bennell, forty, apparently were slain in the cellar of a staid downtown house in a quiet residential section of Brooklyn. The major portions of their bodies were found in three sacks in the stone cellar. Other parts were found, wrapped in blankets, scattered among the shrubbery of a nearby churchyard, and a pair of legs, believed to have belonged to one of the women, were found Saturday morning in Battery Park, Manhattan.

Today several fingers were found in a sewer pipe.

Police cannot reconcile themselves to the belief that robbery was the only motive for the brutal slayings. The bodies of the women had been terribly mutilated, hacked and torn into several pieces with axes and saws. The weapons with which the murders were committed were found in the basement of the home where Mrs. Brownell lived.

Lee, who is a Norwegian, was employed by Mrs. Brownell as janitor. He knew Mrs. Bennett also, police declare, for it was from Mrs. Bennett that the other woman purchased recently the house at 21 Prospect place in which she lived and kept boarders. He identified the pieced-together bodies of the two women.

Lee is formally charged with homicide.

Police also had under arrest as a material witness Christian Jensen, who roomed with Lee at the Prospect place house. Both men were compelled to view the reconstructed bodies of the women, but steadfastly denied any knowledge of the crime. Otto Nelson, a friend of the two men, was held for questioning.

SAW LEE LEAVE.

Police Inspector Sullivan quoted Fred Schmidt, a witness who lives opposite the murder house, as saying he saw Lee leave the building early yesterday morning carrying a parcel, returning twenty minutes later parcel. The theatre and church other parcel. The theatre and church yard where the packages were found are only a few blocks removed from the house. Miss Brownell was last reported seen July 4. It is believed she met her death that day.

Leroy Brownell, of Gloversville, N. Y., arrived at Brooklyn police headquarters today after being notified of his sister's death. He brought with him the woman's nephew, Guy Baldwin, also of Gloversville. They will make further identification of the body.

A short time before the two murders were discovered, the body of a man, hacked to pieces in similar fashion, was found in a cellar on the Manhattan East Side. He had been dead a year. Police do not connect this with the other crimes.

MAKES FACE AT WIFE IN COURT TRAGEDY

necessary—was playing happily about the courtroom and corridor when Dr. Clifford took the stand.

He admitted he drinks sometimes, gambles, and stays out nights late occasionally.

"I have nothing to hide; I will answer all questions," he declared as questioning began by George A. Douglas, counsel for his divorced wife.

Q.—Do you remember having some trouble with your wife about whipping the baby? A.—Yes, when the baby was eleven months old.

Q.—What took place then, doctor? A.—The baby was very small and was running around the rooms. Her mother gave her a whipping for pulling down a vase.

MONEY FOR BABY.

Q.—Do you remember when the baby fell out of a window? A.—Yes.

Q.—She took the baby to the hospital, despite your refusal to take it? A.—I didn't refuse. I told her she had more time than I did to take the baby to the hospital.

Q.—Now you have a good deal of feeling against your wife? A.—No, not a good deal.

Q.—She left you in October, 1926? A.—Yes.

Q.—You contributed nothing to her support until February 18, 1926, when the court ordered you to pay her $15 a week. A.—No. I paid nothing for her, but I paid for the baby.

NEVER WAS DRUNK.

Q.—At the time the court ordered you to pay support for your wife and child, why do you say you should only pay support to the child and not to your wife? A.—My baby needs my support. My wife does not deserve a cent of it.

Q.—Were you ever drunk? A.—Not that I remember.

Q.—Do you gamble? A.—I used to; I don't now.

Q.—Do you drink now? A.—Not lately, but if I felt like it, I would.

Q.—Did you ever injure your wife's eye, which necessitated hospital treatment?

Dr. Clifford laughed aloud, then answered:

"Not that I know of."

WIFE UNDER OBSERVATION.

Taken by his own counsel, Vernon W. Marr:

Q.—What was your wife sent to th. Boston City for? A.—For observation.

Q.—You did go out when you were married, didn't you? A.—I first started to go out to the fights and to things like that, but she objected. So then I bought myself a radio and became a radio bug like a lot of others, and then I was home every single night.

Q.—Did she object to the radio? A.—Yes.

Q.—Has she got a temper? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did she exercise it on the baby? A.—Yes, she was always trying—as she called it—to train the child right. I don't think I thought she could even reason for itself. She talked to the baby like a grownup. She would not spoil the child up when she was crying with cramps until she was thoroughly convinced that the baby was sick.

Q.—What did you figure out by treatment of the baby was? A.—I seemed to me that she was going to show the baby who was boss of the house.

Police, boy scouts and volunteer searches have been combing the woods near Dudley for Mrs. Henry G. Willis, missing since July 2. A note in her bank book saying her life had been threatened led police to believe she might have been slain. (See Story on Page 1).

DOCTOR'S FATAL LOVE BARED

Morgan City, La., July 11 (I.N.S.)—Details of the love affair which Dr. Thomas Dreher and Mrs. Ada Lebeouf tried so hard to shield from the husband they murdered on July 1 will be laid tomorrow before the Grand Jury at Franklin.

The women "go-between," who carried love letters from Dr. Dreher to Mrs. Lebeouf, and from her to him, has been summoned to appear before the jury, District Attorney Voorhoust announced. His expects her testimony to weigh heavily with the jury which is to be asked to indict Dr. Dreher, Mrs. Lebeouf and James Beadle, the trapper, for first degree murder.

The district attorney said he had summoned fourteen witnesses. The town is buzzing with discovery that Mrs. Lebeouf danced on July 2, the night after her husband was killed and his body slashed from the neck to the waist.

Interest of the townspeople centres on James Beadle and they hope the Grand Jury will reveal his part in the death of Lebeouf. Beadle has become the man of mystery in the case with his steadfast and unfaltering denial of any part in the murder. Dr. Dreher and Mrs. Lebeouf say he shot Lebeouf and ripped his body open.

BOY FLOGGED BY MASKED MEN

Birmingham, Ala., July 11 (A.P.)—Coincident with the announcement from Montgomery that a bill would be introduced in the State Legislature tomorrow to ban wearing of masks in the State of Alabama for other than legitimate amusement purposes, the Birmingham Age-Herald today revealed another case of flogging by masked and robed men, the third in Alabama within two weeks. It was at these floggings that the proposed bill was aimed.

The Age-Herald quoted Eaton Murchison, seventeen, of Bessemer, Ala., as saying that on the night of June 26 he was taken from an automobile in which he and another youth were riding with two "strange" girls and was severely whipped by five men who wore hoods and masks.

In none of the flogging cases have arrests been made thus far.

GERMAN ACE TO HOP FOR SAN FRANCISCO SEPT. 10

Berlin, July 11 (A.P.)—Otto Koennecke, the famous German war ace, plans to hop off about September 1 on his projected non-stop flight from Berlin to San Francisco. He will fly a Caspar biplane fitted with a single water-cooled motor.

He told the Associated Press today that he would be accompanied by no financial backer. Count George Salm-Laubach, a well known German sportsman.

LAWRENCE BALL PLAYER ARRESTED FOR ROBBERY

Lawrence, July 11 (A.P.)—Hugh Bradbury, outfielder for the former Lawrence Independent, in the Twilight League, and William McAuliffe, also of this city, were held in $1,000 for the grand jury today charged with robbing Samuel Forsythe, of Andover, of $55 Saturday night. Police are searching for another man.

HELEN CROCKER IS BRIDE IN LONDON

London, July 11 (A.P.)—Miss Helen Victoria Crocker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Crocker, of San Francisco, and Henry Potter Russell, son of Mrs. Charles Howland Russell of New York, were married here.

The Countess de Limur, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Russell is a grandson of the late Bishop Potter and is senior partner of Russell, Miller & Carey, members of the New York Stock Exchange.

BYRD CANCELS PARTING FETE

Le Touquet, France, July 11 (I.N.S.)—Although Commander Byrd has recovered from the illness which forced him to leave Paris for the quiet of Cabourg, he has asked the Cherbourg officials to cancel the official reception set for tomorrow.

Commander Byrd stated that he does not feel able to undergo the ordeal of a farewell ovation. Commander Byrd, with Acosta, Balchen and Noville, sails for home tomorrow on the Leviathan.

They will stop at Ver-sur-Mer to say farewell to the inhabitants of that village who gave them aid after their landing in the sea.

London, July 11 (I.N.S.)—Sir Alan Cobham, noted British aviator, may accompany Charles A. Levine and Marcel Drouhin on their attempted flight from Paris to New York, it was reported here today.

Levine has been in conference with Sir Alan, but refused to comment on the nature of their talks.

Levine said the start will be made as soon as equipment for his plane arrives from New York.

CIRCUS ACCIDENT VICTIM TO BE BURIED TOMORROW

Miss Cora Evelyn Wood, daughter of the late Robert M. Wood, naval architect and formerly of East Boston, was killed in Elizabethtown, N. Y., on Friday, it was learned here. Miss Wood, who was one of the leading aerial artists with Hunt's Circus, fell from the top of the tent while performing on the aerial ladder last Tuesday and broke her neck.

The funeral will take place from her home, 19 Hillcrest road, East Milton, on tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

PROFESSOR FORTE TO BE HONORED TONIGHT

Men prominent in every walk of life will honor Professor Felix Forte well known Boston attorney, at a dinner and reception tonight at the Copley-Plaza.

Mr. Forte was recently appointed associate professor at the Boston University Law School, where he was graduated some years ago. His promotion was the result of a rare procedure in university traditions inasmuch as it came "above the ranks," for Mr. Forte was serving as an instructor at the Law School prior to his new appointment.

SAPIRO HAPPY, FORD SUIT TO BE SETTLED

Chicago, July 11 (A.P.)—Aaron Sapiro—"just an accident of destiny in the vindication of the Jewish people," as he described himself—is completely satisfied with Henry Ford's published apologia for what Ford's Dearborn Independent has said about the Jews.

So satisfied is he, in fact, that he said after returning home from Canada, that he believed his million dollar suit against Ford and the Dearborn Independent would be settled out of court—possibly today.

"The retraction, apology and explanation have fulfilled the purposes of the suit, so far as the main intention is concerned," he said.

"I certainly have no desire to cause Mr. Ford any embarrassment whatsoever, and I mean that to apply from all standpoints."

Sapiro said negotiations for an out-of-court settlement have been conducted "over the heads" of Ford's counsel. He said he believed the public retraction "as a digger surprise to Senator James A. Reed than to any other concerned.

"My counsel and I were 'a negotiations for several months', bring about the main result, dealing directly with Ford," Sapiro said.

BRITAIN SWAPS ATTITUDE ON CRUISERS

Geneva, Switzerland, July 11 (A.P.)—What was regarded as a significant change in the British attitude toward the cruiser problem was evident this afternoon when it was announced in authoritative British circles that if Great Britain and the United States would agree to limit the number of 10,000-ton cruisers to about ten Great Britain would be prepared to accept the American maximum total tonnage figure of 400,000 tons.

The plenary session of the tripartite naval conference was postponed today because of the death of Kevin O'Higgins who was a member of the British delegation.

Although the official statement attributed the postponement to the assassination of O'Higgins, observers declared the real reason was a desire to prevent the break up of the conference through a deadlock on the cruiser problem.

NEWFOUNDLAND FIRE RAGES

St. Johns, N. F., July 11 (A.P.)—Six houses and two stores were destroyed in a forest fire raging in the northern side of Gander Bay, in the Fogo district today.

Report said that the fire was advancing along a three-mile front, threatening the settlement of Carmanville and a large part of the district. A force of men to fight was sent out immediately.

STOCK AND $20,000 CASH LEFT TO HALF-BROTHER

Eleven shares of stock in the A. Storrs & Bement Company, paper merchants, are left to his half brother, Albert E. Nickerson and his wife, Grace Grace L., of Arlington, along with $20,000 to be shared between them by the will of Mrs. Helen F. McQuillan of Brookline filed in Norfolk Probate Court today and in which cash bequests totaling nearly $40,000 are made to relatives and servants.

Mr. McQuillan died June 25. Other bequests are: Ella G. Nickerson, wife of a nephew, $5,000; Winifred N. Nickerson, daughter of a nephew, $5,000, when she is twenty-one, but if needed for her education she can have it before that time; Ernest M. Nickerson, a nephew, and his wife, Ethel M., $2,500 each; Mrs. Caroline B. McQuillan, widow of her late husband's brother, Robert McQuillan of Dedham, $2,500; Robert C. McQuillan, Edward L. Martinez, Jr., and James M. Martinez, grandsons, $500 each; Ernest A. Aln, Alice M. McGarry and Elizabeth M. Stevens, servants, $500 each.

GARDNER MAN ON TRIAL FOR VERMONT MURDER

Montpelier, Vt., July 11 (A.P.)—Peter Christos of Gardner, Mass., charge with murder of Mrs. Fairy McCloud of this city, last March 27, when he shot her several times, went on trial in Washington County Court today.

Christos has been in a hospital here and in an insane hospital at Waterbury, Vt., since the shooting and it is expected the insane hospital staff will testify as to his mental condition.

Christos came to Montpelier the night preceding the shooting and was found in the room of Mrs. McCloud more two hours after the shooting took place. Mrs. McCloud was dead.

WOMAN ROBS GUESTS IN BAPTIST HOTEL

Ocean Park, Me., July 11 (A.P.)—Police are searching today for a unidentified woman who is said to have stolen more than $300 and a gold watch from guests' rooms in the Ocean Park Baptist hotel here.

Mrs. Scott, janitress, furnished police with a description of the woman with the key, gained access to the rooms with pass keys after she had reached an upper corridor on the pretext of calling on friends.

The hotel is owned and managed by the New England Baptist Association.

AGED MAN IS SOUGHT FOR CLOTHES THEFT

The old man with white hair, who has victimized almost two score Cambridge landladies in the last year by renting a room without paying a deposit and then skipping out later with clothing stolen from others in the house, made his latest theft at the lodging of Mrs. Mary Gray at No. 133 Auburn street, Cambridge.

After the old man departed hastily, the landlady discovered a coat and two dresses, all valued at $75, had been stolen from a hall closet.

FLY FISHERMAN HOOKS HIS FATHER FROM DEATH

Ruskin, Fla., July 11 (A.P.)—Daniel Holloway, bass fisherman, is thankful his boy Horace can make a good cast. Father and son were out in a boat, 100 feet from the shore fishing in the Little Manatee River, when father fell overboard and lost consciousness. The son could not swim. He made a cast, the hook caught in his coat and clothing and he was pulled ashore.

SEEK RIGHTS TO FILM 'WORLD'S ILLUSION'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

LOS ANGELES, July 11.—Sid Grauman, Hollywood's picturesque movie impresario, is about to sign a contract with Joseph Schenck to direct three pictures. Mr. Grauman is ambitious to film "The World's Illusion." Wasserman's novel, now owned by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Rex Ingram planned several years ago to film "The World's Illusion" for M-G-M, abroad, but since he has done nothing with it, it seems not unlikely that Mr. Schenck will be able to persuade Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to part with it.

In confirming the rumor that Mr. Grauman will direct, Mr. Schenck said: "Sid should make a fine director. He has imagination, artistic ability, and I'm ought to know what the public likes. He tells me he is tired of exploiting other people's pictures and that he wants to have the chance to do the same for some of his own."

The contract is due to be signed any day now. And Mr. Schenck thought it would be only a matter of a few weeks before the man who made the Chinese Theatre, Egyptian and Grauman's million dollar theatres famous in Hollywood, would be doing a little megaphoning on his own.

BESSIE LOVE and the ukulele will be leaving Hollywood next week for Europe. Bessie will do her dancing and singing between times, for she will be very busy playing opposite William Boyd in "The West Pointer."

This "West Pointer" is the subject of much talk at the DeMille Studios. Only a few weeks ago Douglas Day returned from the National Academy with several thousand feet of film photographed on the grounds. He was able to accomplish this little feat through the help of Majors Alexander Chilton and Robert Glassburn, who wrote the original story.

Certainly the movies are going in strong for entertainment with a military flavor. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is already half way through with "The West Point" picture. William Haines, who plays the lead, is in West Point with his company. Looks as if we shall be making comparisons in a short time.

Richard Barthelmess, a few years ago, used scenes from Annapolis and "Classmates," also filmed by kind permission of the academy officials.

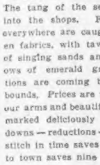
Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dear Anne:

I love mid-summer shopping. The tang of the sea has crept into the shops. Flowers from everywhere are caught into silken fabrics, with tawny stretches of singing sands and long shadows of emerald green. Vacations are coming by leaps and bounds. Prices are tumbling into our arms and beautiful clothes are marked deliciously low. Markdowns — reductions — sales! A stitch in time saves nine. A trip to town saves nine times.

Here's $8.95

That wants to go to Evelyn's, at 8 Winter Street. Eight dollars and ninety-five cents looks like a clear cool $15 or $20 gown in this week. It will buy a summer jersey, in white, pink and the yellow. The smart modish jersey which a pretty girl needs down at the beach. Or a white flannel coat—a stunning swagger coat for moonlight walks between the dances. It will buy Fastons silk dresses in harmonious stripes. Two-piece short-sleeved, strictly sport dresses. And all-over prints, washable crepe de chines, rajahs —darling dresses to be refreshed and laughter into our play days and work days. But Evelyn has bought a splendid selection of dresses for $12.95, too. Navy georgettes, over printed slips, delicate printed chiffons, jersey suits with silk blouses, and Parisian cut coats. Dresses from size 14-44. In every color imaginable.



Banish the Bugaboo

Of "that tired feeling." It isn't the heat, it's the feet that drag you out in summer time. Swollen feet see no joy in a walk by the breaking waves at sunset. Throbbing corns no delight on each woodland road. Weakened aches agonize at the sight of a tennis racket and varicose veins want to go right straight home.

But since you can't check your feet at the baggage room, you get them the courtesy of a call on Dr. Allen P. Saul, the competent podiatrist-chiropodist, who has helped so many of our friends. His office is in room 312 of the New Studio Building, 110 Tremont Street. And in 20 minutes he will deftly remove those corns and callouses, apply the salves and powders that keep them cool, and massage the muscles toward correct position. Perhaps then a pair of shoes in light summer kid, with the arch supports built in, for $8.00 a pair. Shoes that keep step with fashion and walk attendance on the health of your feet. (Dr. Saul's office is open Saturday.)

Rose Weiner

Is holding a Clearance Sale on hats. In room 303, at 8 Winter Street. A $5.00 sale, which includes hats formerly marked at $10, $12.50, $15 and $18. Just like that. Simple sentences stating a sale—but like the "shot heard round the world," this item will bring crowds to the doors of Rose Weiner. Because she's an artist in the millinery world, and everybody knows it. Her hats are distinctive, individual, fitted and adapted to one's personality with a genius that's as sure as it is rare. A hat at Rose Weiner's—a street hat, evening hat, afternoon hat, sport hat—small, medium sized, large hats—at $5.00. A winsome hat in summer felt, droopy milan, horse hair, leghorn, silk and visca. The sale starts today—and continues only as long as they last, for Rose is probably as a dish of sherbet at a children's party.

The Norfolk Hosiery

Company have a special this week that's a wonder. Pure thread silk hosiery—two pair for $1.65. Full-fashioned, reinforced in the cuff and feet with lisle. And a clear, fine service weight. I couldn't believe it true when I heard it, I ran my hand down the two lovely things to see if they were really there. They were—without a flaw, as beautiful as you could wish. Two pair for $1.65. But only 800 pair of them left. Another big item is the all-silk chiffon hosiery with the contrasting heel for $1.00. In gray, tan and white, with the narrow French heel which is slenderizing as well as smart. And as a bit of good news for the larger woman who would love to wear the pretty silky things of today, they are selling outsize bloomers for $2.95. A soft silky rayon, in white, pink, nile green and orchid. The Norfolk Hosiery Company is on the street floor arcade of the Little Building, 80 Boylston Street.

If It's Underwear—Go To Thresher's

Thresher Bros. (13 Temple Place) are making sweeping reductions in the underwear department previous to Summer stock taking. And it opens up drawers full, counters full of exquisite satinlines which may be ours almost for the cost of making. When I went up to learn the details of this sale I was shown step-ins, French pants, bloomers, slips and chemises—of every material our luxury loving hearts desire, in all the pale flesh tints, the mauve, orchids, Nile greens and peach shades—dozens and dozens and dozens of them. As lovely as trousseau undies. And when the head of the department told me the price was but $1.95 I could hardly believe it. Some were of fine crepe de chine with medallion inserts and edges of creamy lace. Some had scalloped edges, bound with contrasting silk, embroidered and festooned with wee rosebuds.

The slips are of radium and rayon. Some trimmed with lace and some plain. They are cut full, well made, with side pleats for extra width and nicely finished. And yet they, too, are closing out at $1.95.

The bloomers of glove silk at $1.95 are perhaps the most surprising value of all. Firmly reinforced from cuff to cuff and cut full. In all the lovely pastel shades. Truly, isn't this a welcome paragraph of news?

July Brings Cheramy to Filene's

Yes, Cheramy has come to Filene's, with a whole new line of exquisite toiletries, in the most enchanting odor that ever delighted your sensitive little nose. We were drifting by the perfume counter, Barbara and I, wishing for something utterly alluring and refreshing to appear—something that would crown the day with a sparkling star. And Lo and Behold—Cheramy had arrived. A whole line of Cheramy in that new odor, "Blarritz."

Of course, we greeted each member of this famous family with joy and sniffed ecstatically to catch the wondrous fragrance. What is it? Dreamy spring, sublime sophistication, exotic or oriental mystery? I don't know. Truly I don't know. It's delicate, dreamy, alluring—undefinable and utterly delightful. Therein lies its charm. One instant "Blarritz" is revealed as the cool, woody fragrance tossed up by a wee brook as it winds through moss and columbine down to the sea. Then it's an old-fashioned garden, sleeping drowsily in the afternoon sun. And then—wisteria, roses, lilac and lilies. Perfumes from the southland blended with fragrance from the north.

The smallest size bottle of perfume is $1.00; toilet water $2.00. The face powder, sachet, talcum and bath salts, $1.00 each. And brilliantine for 50c. The face powder comes in five different shades.

Everybody Said

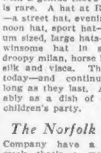
Her proofs were lovely. The trouble came when we tried to decide which one to have finished. In one her hair glistened with silver moonlight. In another her features were in brilliant relief, and in another the radiance touched the highlight in her eyes, and it seemed as if the girl herself were laughing up at us. They were unusually beautiful—every one of them. And the best part is that they only cost $5 for six of them. She took advantage of the special July offer at the Arlington Studio, 394 Boylston Street. Six photographs for $5, using the new Hollywood lighting system, finished in the Elite style and mounted on artistic double deckle edge folders. Easily posed, in a studio that is cool and comfortable, with an atmosphere so friendly and courteous that all stress melted away, and she was "caught" at her best. Call Kenmore 1519.

All Aboard

The Vacation Special at Landfield's, 8 Winter Street. And oh, what a special it is. It runs express straight through to a $2.00 saving. Four full dollars' worth of cosmetics with every $10 purchase of underwear and hosiery. With $5 invested in their underwear, $5.00 for your service weight and chiffon hosiery—you can step right up to the cosmetic counter and select your perfume, powder, rouge, or whatever you will, up to the amount of $2.00. And yet you will find the prices on the underwear and hosiery at their regular standard value. Stunning silk slips at $2.95, an exquisite nightgown for $2.75, two pair of service hose at $1.59 each, and a pair of chiffon hose for $1.69. A total of $10.61, which entitles you to an exquisite bottle of perfume or other luxuries to make your vacation fragrant and sweet.

A Dip in Waves

Entitles the French Beauty Shop to headlines for the rest of July. Big headlines reading "Permanent waves," Nestle Circuline method. Entire head—for $10.00. At the French Beauty Shop, third floor, New Studio Building, 110 Tremont Street. Under that management we would like to add a little message of our own. Young and Billy give beautiful waves. Soft, swirling, natural waves. And a permanent wave under their skilful touch for $10 is a very thing at a bargain price and a real delight from the day it is set, until the last wee curl is clipped away. Wouldn't it be well to call right now and make your appointment? The phone number is Congress 8166.



The Silvers

Want a vacation. They want to close the shop for a week or two and go off for their much needed rest. So they are announcing a great summer clearance sale—now, this week—instead of at the end of the season. With prices that make it the outstanding event of the week. Dresses which were $19.75, $20 and $45—going—going—gone—for $12.75, $16.75 and $19.75. Dresses which are new, fresh and lovely. One-of-a-kind, exclusive and ready to wear. In every size, from 16-44. And wonderfully fine in material and line. Why, the orchid georgette sketched is but $19.75. With the new length coat, exquisite white blouse and all. Silvers' Specialty Shop is on the fifth floor of the Blake Building, 89 Temple Place. It's open all day Saturday.

It's Barivah

That's making the stir in the beauty world. It's Barivah that's set the sewing machines whirring, the tucking, the stitching and happy creation of the loveliest and daintiest summer frocks. Barivah is the long lost fabric from Arabian nights, the silken gleaming fabric worn by Persian princes and draped in palatial halls. No soap or sun can harm Barivah. It's made of celaness and silk, and sold exclusively by the Shuro Company, at 140 Bedford Street. In flower prints for the children, plain colors for sports wear—light weight, medium weight and rich heavy weight for draperies and hangings. The print is $1.52 a yard (36 in. width; the light weight $1.52 (39 in. width, and sports weight $1.77 a yard.

Summer Supports

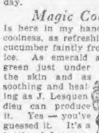
Are the big feature of the Naturaline Corset Company, rooms 710-711 in the Lawrence Building, 149 Tremont Street. Supports which are the last word. The most popular number is an all-elastic step-in, the lightest, nicest thing you could wear. It gives gracefully to each motion, yet holds you in fine line and supports the muscles which need support. The other favorite is a corselette of lace net, with elastic webbing over the hips. This is $4.95. Porous, pretty and practical, with a boned reinforcement in front. For the underwear special, there's a slip of heavy radium silk for $5.50. In lustrous white, or pale flesh, with a deep shadow hem, side pleats and more width than I've seen in any other slips.

Butterflies

Are in the air. A sure sign that momentous events are happening in the Butterfly Hat Shop—our exclusive little hat shop on the sixth floor of the Ambassador Building, 16 Winter Street. True enough — follow the butterflies and you'll find Rose Herbert just opening her great Midsummer Clearance Sale, with a price of $5 on nearly all of her hats. It's a semi-annual event. Only twice during the year can one buy a Rose Herbert hat for $5.00. Once in mid-winter, once in mid-summer. For the quality of them is of another world, and the touch which she gives sends them flying in flights—smart black and orange hat boxes to folks who know that real distinction is worth its price. But this week we can have one for $5. Even on Saturday, for the Butterfly Hat Shop is an oasis in the desert of closed doors—it is open Saturday.

Magic Coolness

Is here in my hand. Cucumber coolness, as refreshing as a crisp cucumber faintly frosted from the ice. As emerald as the young green just under the skin and as soothing and healing as J. Lesquendieu can produce it. Yes — you've guessed it. It's a bottle of Lesquendieu Cucumber Cream, which I bought at Meyer Jonasson Company, corner of Tremont and Boylston Streets, for $2.00. The larger size bottles are $2.50. It's a liquid cream, without rival for whitening the skin. It keeps it clear and soft, protected against the wind and sun, supplied with oil for "weathered" pores and light nourishment for the tissues. And being a Lesquendieu preparation, you know it's one of the finest. Meyer Jonasson Company carry it exclusively. Oil and by the way, Anne, don't forget to get your Tussy lipstick there, too. It's waterproof and costs $1.50.



If You Follow

The summer trails of youth and laughter and dancing charm to its original source, you would find it at Merin's Beauty Salon, third floor of the Dexter Building, 453 Washington Street. For there girls are groomed to perfection; hair cut by Hazel in the most becoming lines, and waved in a permanent swirl that brings the soft hair into loose flat waves about the face, as naturally as a child's. You get the master-touch at Mertin's, the trained technique, under the supervision of an experienced specialist of the hair and scalp. And it puts you in tune with this great glorious summer. You're part of its beauty, with a wave that catches each sunbeam and mellows with each passing week. CONGRESS WILL AID AVIATION

Washington, July 11 (A.P.)—Congress absent from Washington during the period that American airmen have added bright pages to aerial history, probably will return to the Capitol this Fall with an ear more sympathetically inclined than ever toward aviation.

It is regarded as certain there will be no disposition to curtail either of the two building programs, one of which contemplates delivery and maintenance of 1,000 first class fighting planes for the navy at the end of three years, and other 1,250 planes for the army.

Members of Congress have been paying close attention to what has been going on in the air, and those that have spoken have had only words of praise and admiration.

DRY LAW NEEDS BIG PARTY TO SAVE IT, SAYS BORAH

Chicago, July 11 (A.P.)—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, in the current Christian Advocate, declares that the eighteenth amendment will become "fossilized" unless a great political party makes an issue of its enforcement.

"There are those in both parties who are against he eighteenth amendment," he said. "Unless the party as a party throws the pledge and the prestige of the party behind its enforcement, there will always be this balancing of the pros and cons, the wets and drys, and enforcement will be as it now is in many localities, a mere skirmishing between the lines.

"I venture the opinion that unless the upholding and enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, in view of its open, persistent challenge, can call to its support a great political party, the eighteenth amendment will continue more and more to be disregarded until, as one of its shrewd adversaries has declared, it becomes 'fossilized and futile.'"

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE ASKS COOLIDGE TO OBEY 'ORDERS'

If Major Haynes was not appointed I would have another opportunity to be heard as to second choice."

Wheeler reports that on four occasions when Commissioner Haynes was to be discharged for insubordinate he was able, with his influence at the White House and Treasury Department, to keep Haynes in office.

The executive committee sent a representative direct to President Coolidge to complain about Secretary of the Treasury Mellon and to have him give Mellon "hindering the work of prohibition enforcement."

Wheeler accused Secretary Mellon of wanting to oust Commissioner Haynes so that his successor "would deal more liberally with those who want more alcohol and whiskey."

On President Harding's death, Arthur J. Davis, Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in the New England States, was summoned to Washington by Haynes to use his "personal acquaintance with President Coolidge" to keep the new President in line.

In reading these startling disclosures, the reader must keep in mind the fact that this super-organization, seeking control over illegally elected and lawfully appointed officials of the United States Government, has not the slightest authority from the people.

The Anti-Saloon League has no more authority than the Ku Klux Klan to supervise and direct the affairs of Government in this country.

In fact, the Anti-Saloon League is the twin of the Klan.

Both are organizations of fanatic busybodies determined to have certain laws of the country enforced in their own private, particular way, under their supervision and direction.

How quickly the Anti-Saloon League was on the job as soon as the Volstead Law was being enacted to establish itself as a supervisor of Government activities is disclosed by the records of the League.

At a meeting of the executive committee in Chicago on Sept. 18, 1919, Wayne B. Wheeler was vested with supreme authority at Washington to exercise the power of the League in controling Federal policy and Federal appointments under the new prohibition law. The official minutes of the meeting recorded that:

"The following motion was presented by William H. Anderson and edited by William H. Anderson and A. J. Barton:

"Resolved, that since law enforcement has become a matter of first importance it is now necessary that the province, powers, duties and responsibilities of national officials having to do with enforcement be defined with as great clearness as now exists with respect to other departments, and to this end it is hereby declared the sense of the executive committee that on all questions relating to law enforcement, legal work and recommendations to departments of the government concerning appointments having to do with law enforcement and related matters, the legal department is authorized to represent the Anti-Saloon League subject to the approval of the executive committee.

"The resolution was adopted."

Of course the most important office was that of prohibition commissioner. Wheeler set out to obtain the appointment of Major Roy A. Haynes of Ohio.

"Haynes was a small country editor, with no executive experience. His leading qualification for the job was the fact that he had been a platform sneaker for the Anti-Saloon League.

Wheeler got Haynes appointed after a three-for-all fight for the office in which, Wheeler explained, "there were literally hundreds of people in the city working for the various candidates."

A SECRET REPORT

Here is Wheeler's secret report to the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League on his success in getting Haynes appointed in July 1921:

"Report of the legal department for the quarter ending July 14, 1921.

"To the members of the national executive committee:

"The two most prominent national prohibition enforcement officers in whom we are interested were the federal revenue commissioner and the prohibition commissioner.

"We followed the usual League policy in seeing to it, first of all, that recognized unfit applicants should not be appointed. This strengthened our position when the beginning with the appointing powers.

"After the most objectionable candidates were crossed off the federal revenue commissioner, it looked for several days as though Governor Hooper, of Tennessee, would be appointed.

"The President (Harding) was friendly to his appointment, but the secretary of Treasury (Mellon) felt that he could not handle the business end of it as well as Mr. Blair.

"Mr. Blair stood right on this question, and it was impossible, of course, for us to even express any opposition to his appointment.

"We have been able to work with him very satisfactorily, and outside of a few appointments which were the result of political factional fights the choice of enforcement officers has been very good.

"The most difficult contest which we faced was in securing an efficient officer for prohibition commissioner.

"I had the assurance from the Administration that no one would be appointed, for this position who was objectionable to us, and I proceeded at every step in the faith that this promise would be kept.

"The only time we faced any chance of failure was when the two factions in Ohio divided, one for Major Haynes and the other for Mr. Fairbanks. Mr. Fairbanks had voted dry in Ohio contests and helped raise the money to put the State dry, but he was generally thought and otherwise unfitted for this place.

"The appointing power knew his attitude on this question and our relation to him. It made it very difficult to present a correct statement of facts which would show that he should not be appointed. As the fight developed, certain liberal interests took a hand in it and, as usual, injured their own cause.

"The fight became so intense that the President for several days would not see even the United States Senator from Ohio concerning this matter. There was literally hundreds of people in the city working for the various candidates.

FIVE DAYS BEFORE

"The nearest that the opposition came to obtaining a candidate not entirely objectionable to them was in the possible appointment of Mr. Fairbanks, who had always voted dry.

"We, however, had the asurance from the White House every few days that if Major Haynes was not appointed I would have another opportunity to be heard as to second choice.

"Knowing the possibility of having to agree upon a new man because of the factional fight in Ohio, we had matters so arranged that the second choice would have been quite satisfactory, but we never had to reach it.

"To make the situation more complex, almost five days before the appointment was made, an Ohio paper carried Major Haynes' picture with a statement that he had been appointed. When his appointment did not immediately follow it looked as though a new man would be chosen.

"The next five or six days were anxious ones, but we never lost faith that Major Haynes would be appointed, and the announcement of his appointment was received with enthusiasm by the friends of prohibition everywhere.

"He is a man of strong convictions on this issue. He has good organizing ability. He has tact in dealing with men, good self-control and I have every reason to believe that he will make a success of this department unless he is hampered by undue influence from his superior officers.

"We may have some trouble with the Secretary of the Treasury. He, of course, has the final determination in certain matters of policy.

"This is one reason why we strongly favored a provision in the supplemental enforcement bill to give concurrent power to the Justice Department to cancel the permits of those manufacturers and dealers in non-beverage liquors that are violating the law.

"We have a good working understanding with both of these departments, and wherever our State men present their protests in tangible form, with specific charges that could be backed up, in almost every instance unworthy candidates have been rejected.

Looked for 'Some Trouble' With Mellon Over Dry Appointment

"In several instances we have succeeded where all of the political forces in the State were united upon a single objectionable applicant for one of these offices.

"After Mr. Haynes was named commissioner, a large number of applicants seemed to think that we made the appointments from this office and made their appeals to us direct.

"Many of the subordinate appointees take it for granted that they must look to the inforcement of this office before they can secure a position. As it is, we have never had as many friends in these responsible positions as we have now."

How close Wheeler kept to President Harding is indicated by the fact that "we had the assurance from the White House every few days that if Major Haynes was not appointed I would have another opportunity to be heard as to second choice." Mr. Fairbanks, whom Wheeler finally eliminated, was the son of ex Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks. Roosevelt's running mate in 1904.

Haynes was in. Now came the still more serious job of keeping him in. Under his fumbling leadership prohibition broke down completely and the resultant scandal caused constant pressure upon the administration to put a man of some efficiency in Haynes' place.

Even President Harding in one of his messages to Congress denounced prohibition enforcement as a national scandal. Nevertheless the Anti-Saloon League had lashed Hayes to the mast and there he stayed.

Rum fleets dotted the ocean from Eastport, Me., to the Rio Grande and from San Diego to Puget Sound. Streams of liquor poured over the Canadian and Mexican borders.

Bootleg rings operated. In every large city in the country, and trains were crowded with drummers selling bootleg whiskey as if it were merchandise.

Through it all Haynes sat in academic aloofness at Washington, issuing daily statements that all was lovely, and finally writing a book, "Prohibition Inside Out," describing had he had practically made the country dry as alkali.

Apart from the fiasco of prohibition enforcement, Haynes made his position untenable by repeated insubordination to his superior officers, Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

On one occasion he was obliged to make a public apology to Blair and Mellon from the charge of interfering with the work of his division.

Observing that Commissioner Haynes was slipping, Wheeler, on May 17, 1923, called on the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League for help. The committee that day met in Washington, and Wheeler addressed them as follows, according to the minutes:

"Mr. Wheeler stated that a breach between Commissioner Haynes and Commissioner Blair was inevitable and suggested that a strong letter be written to the President.

"Mr. Wheeler also suggested that a resolution be passed by the committee. Upon motion by Superintendent White, seconded by Dr. Carre, a committee of three was appointed to re-draft the resolution submitted by Mr. Wheeler. The committee appointed by the chair for this purpose consisted of Messrs White, Carre and Anderson."

The Mr. Anderson referred to was William H. Anderson, then superintendent of the New York Anti-Saloon league, and later tried and convicted for misuse of Anti-Saloon League funds.

So a "strong letter" was drawn up and sent to the President, in which Commissioner Haynes was praised as "a man of sterling worth, unfailing integrity, and of irreproachable character," and emphasizing that he must be backed up by all the resources of the law for "an honest and efficient administration."

All through the secret records of the League is apparent a rankling feeling that Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, whose department has general control over prohibition enforcement, is not always thoroughly in accord with the League's wishes.

At a meeting of the executive committee in Washington, July 12, 1924, they decided to send an emissary direct to President Coolidge to protest about Secretary Mellon. The official minutes disclose this:

"The following resolution was adopted by the committee relative to law enforcement:

"Resolved, that Superintendent Baker be instructed to take up with each State League the necessity of completing its county organizations to carry out the League program for law enforcement and legislative work, and that the superintendent also confer with the President concerning the reports that the Treasury Department is hindering the work of the prohibition enforcement department."

In a secret report to the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League, dated Nov. 25, 1924, Mr. Wheeler relates how he had been able to block four attempts to remove Commissioner Haynes from office. He said:

"Within the last three years four attempts have been made to oust Commissioner Haynes from his office. In each instance we have been able to learn of it in advance and offset the drive. Another effort will be made in the near future. It will be more difficult to offset it this time."

Of course, it was Commissioner Haynes who enabled Mr. Wheeler to "learn in advance" about attempts to oust Haynes. In this same confidential report to his executive committee, Wheeler directly charges Secretary Mellon and Internal Revenue Commissioner Blair with wanting Haynes to be more liberal with "those who want more alcohol and whiskey." Wheeler's report says:

Used Friends of Coolidge in Efforts to Aid Cause of Drys

"Secretary Mellon, Mr. Blair and the assistant secretary, who supervises customs and prohibition, Judge Moss, have been more or less irritated at times because of the rulings and the aggressive policies of the prohibition unit.

"They have overruled many of these revisions and policies and occasionally the people have criticized them. They doubtless feel that if Commissioner Haynes were ousted and someone put in his place who would be more pliable, he would deal more liberally with those who want alcohol and whiskey."

Mr. Wheeler was right in figuring it would prove impossible to keep Haynes in charge of prohibition enforcement work, but Wheeler nevertheless was able to keep him in office and retain his title of prohibition commissioner, with salary.

In April, 1925, General Lincoln C. Andrews was appointed assistant secretary of the treasury, with complete authority over prohibition enforcement, customs and coast guard. Andrews wanted to fire Haynes bodily but the Anti-Saloon League was too powerful.

He went on getting $7,500 a year from the Government and retained his title of prohibition commissioner, his duties now being—as General Andrews told the Republican committee—to act as "liaison officer" between the Anti-Saloon

DRY LEAGUE'S 'FRIDAY'

The startling expose being made in the Boston Evening American of the Anti-Saloon League shows that Wayne B. Wheeler, its czar, forced the appointment of Roy A. Haynes (above) as the first prohibition commissioner.

"liaison officer" of the Anti-Saloon League now than he was before. The only difference was that now he was nothing else than a liaison officer. He continued in this capacity until April, 1927, when he was made acting prohibition commissioner.

WHEELER FAILS

Then ensued an effort by Wheeler to have Haynes appointed prohibition commissioner in complete charge of the prohibition unit as reorganized by the Crampton law. The attempt failed. A month ago Haynes was let out of job and salary and the position of prohibition commissioner given to James M. Doran, former chemist for the prohibition unit.

Even when Haynes was prohibition commissioner in charge, he was busy keeping Anti-Saloon League officials in touch with the President. When President Harding died in 1923, Haynes sent a telegram to Arthur J. Davis, then superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in the New England states and later New York State superintendent, to hasten to Washington and use his "personal acquaintance with President Coolidge" to keep the new President in line.

The incident is recorded in a secret report of Davis to the Anti-Saloon League, dated Jan. 8, 1924, as follows:

"Before leaving for Europe Dr. Wheeler called me to Washington for a conference and requested that during his absence I advise with his assistant, Mr. Dunford, concerning any political matters that might arise.

"Immediately following the death of President Harding, and while starting on a short vacation, I received telegrams from Mr. Dunford and also from Major Haynes asking that I come at once to Washington.

"The change in Administration brought with it certain serious problems, and within two or three days in Washington I asked that a meeting of the national legislative committee be called in that city. In the meantime I keep closely in touch with Mrs. Baker and Russell, Dr. Russell spending part of his time in Washington.

"It seemed vitally important to safeguard the league interests and the interests of prohibition with the new administration, and the national legislative committee requested me to remain on guard in Washington until after Dr. Wheeler's return from Europe.

"Because of my personal acquaintance with and knowledge of President Coolidge, I was able to bring immediately to bear the influence of a number of President Coolidge's intimate friends who are actively interested in the prohibition cause, and also was able to head off one or two important appointments that would not have been acceptable to the league.

HAYNES ABSENT

"During a part of this period Major Haynes was absent from Washington on account of illness, but whenever he was present in the city I was in close contact with him and co-operated with him in certain matters of vital importance.

"A full report covering this period was made verbally to Dr. Wheeler on his return September 7, Dr. Russell also being present.

"Just before Dr. Wheeler's return I was able to send a bulletin to the league men throughout the country assuring them that President Coolidge would at least take as strong a position in favor of prohibition enforcement as did his predecessor, Mr. Harding.

"Within a few days I have had even more satisfactory assurances from friends of mine who are intimately acquainted with the President and who have had recent conferences with him.

"Respectfully submitted,

"ARTHUR J. DAVIS.

"January 8, 1924."

What was Dr. Wheeler doing in Europe? Well, he was there at the expense of the United States Government, junketing about at the head of a delegation of ten dry propagandists sent over to attend a convention at Copenhagen in the interests of extending to the rest of the world the blessings of American prohibition.

When the committee got back, Dr. Wheeler wrote its report, had it printed at Government expense and franked over the country.

While commissioner Haynes's record was such that even the power of the Anti-Saloon League could no longer keep him in office, the league promptly got busy to prevent General Lincoln C. Andrews from dismantling the enforcement organization which Haynes had built up with the aid of the League.

Wayne B. Wheeler, in his report to the executive committee in Columbus, Ohio, Sept. 30, 1925, stated that he had vigorously protested to President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon against the decentralization plan of Andrews and had prevented him from fully carrying out his plan. His report on this subject follows:

"The law enforcement situation continues acute. Assistant Andrews has decentralized the law enforcement organization. We prevented the original plan from going through for complete recentralization, namely, to abolish the mobile force that was the connecting link the President, to Mr. Mellon and to General Andrews, because the removal of the mobile force would mean paralyzing effective enforcement.

"General Andrews replied that he was going to depend more upon reform organizations like ours to give accurate information about the situation in the various units of the Government."

Wheeler has an undercover organization of his own cheeking up on prohibition agents throughout the country. The minutes of the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League on Dec. 4, 1925, in the Raleigh Hotel at Washington, record the resolution authorizing Wheeler to establish his espionage system.

The resolution, as passed, read:

"Resolved, That our organization be set to work to check up the activities of the Federal enforcement department, to ascertain what the situation is with regard to appointees and enforcement work in each of the States, and that in the end the data be turned over to the legislative committee and the legislative superintendent for appropriate action."

The business of the snooping is reaching its fullest flower in the citizen population of Washington. An organization called the Citizens' Service Association for Law Enforcement (called "Snoopers" by their opponents) are establishing a "member in every block" to spy upon their neighbors violating the Volstead act.

In opposition arises the "Liberty Boys of '27." Their plan is to have twenty members in every block, pledged to make the "snoopers" wish they hadn't snooped.

Such is the record of the Anti-Saloon League in establishing and maintaining dictatorship with the President and the Federal prohibition enforcement officers.

The Boston American tomorrow will disclose from the secret records of the Anti-Saloon League how it influenced the appointment and actions of Federal judges.

League Early Tried to Influence Coolidge

When President Harding died, Commissioner Haynes wired Arthur J. Davis, then superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League in the New England states to hasten to Washington and use "his personal acquaintance with Coolidge" to keep the new President in line.

A Tailored Frock That is Easy to Make

Here is a smart tailored frock which with this wonderful, simple pattern can be made without the least difficulty by the veriest amateur. Its lines are unusually pleasing, giving height and slimness to the figure. A heavy crepe satin or a light weight wool fabric would make of this a very smart, practical and charming frock.

In the next issue Mr. Whitehead will explain the salient points in the bidding and play of the above hand. Fill out your own chart and compare it with his method.

These hands must not be bid or played "Double Dummy," i. e. as though all four hands were exposed.

Saturday's Game as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

With protection in all four suits, South bids No Trump, rather than make an introductory bid of his weak Diamonds.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 2. Before attempting to develop the Diamonds, South must if possible meet the menace of the adverse Spades. If West holds both the Ace of Hearts and the Ace of Clubs, the Spades are bound to make. But if he holds only one of these Aces and it can be forced out before Declarer's second Spade stopper is played, then West may be prevented from making his long Spades, through lack of a re-entry. Declarer's Hearts being stronger than his Clubs, though shorter in length, Declarer opens Hearts, hoping that if West holds an Ace it may be of Hearts rather than of Clubs. West holding but two Hearts covers the King so as at least to kill an honor with his Ace.

Trick 3. Having little prospect of re-entry in Diamonds, West again undertakes his Ace of Spades, realizing that the only probable chance of making the suit lies in his partner's having had three Spades originally.

Trick 4. It is imperative to duck the Diamonds towards the non-danger hand. East returns the suit, as a Club or Heart lead would clearly be of assistance to the Declarer.

Trick 9. East plays the Jack of Clubs to retain his Heart stopper.

Trick 10. North has discarded with a view to throwing East in with the Ace of Clubs to force him to lead Hearts. This he now does and gains an extra trick. Had there been any doubt as to the location of the Club Ace, the Declarer would have taken his two Heart tricks and rested content with three-odd.

Mr. Whitehead will answer questions concerning your Bridge problems. Write in him care of this paper, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope.

N. E. ROADS LOSE ON RATES

Girl Jilts Count for $100,000

5 MILLIONS INCREASE DENIED

N. E. Railroads Are Refused Rates Sought to Swell Yearly Earnings

Washington, July 11 (A.P.).—The Interstate Commerce Commission refused today to increase substantially the proportionate amount of joint rates going to New England railroads on traffic handled in conjunction with railroads in other parts of the country.

New England lines sought an increase which would have given them about $5,000,000 a year in additional earnings. No increase in rates to shippers was sought.

The commission authorized some changes, but declared that "The trend in New England railroad earnings since 1922 has been more favorable than in the remainder of the Eastern groups. The record affords no basis for giving greater weight to the financial needs of the New England lines."

At the same time some slight changes in the joint rate division on merchandise traffic were allowed, and the New England roads were given an additional proportion of the rates on anthracite coal.

In the joint rates on bituminous coal, the decision said that the Boston & Maine, Maine Central and Central Vermont should not receive any additional portion of the joint rates. The New Haven road was given a slight increase in its divisions of joint bituminous coal rates except for such coal business as it handled in conjunction with the New York Central, upon which no increase was authorized.

The railroads were instructed to make the detailed changes effective September 1.

Girls Cover Bashful Lindy's Plane With Phone Numbers

Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., July 11 (A.P.).—Captain Charles A. Lindbergh ocean flier, is so girl shy that names and telephone numbers gshave have been written all over his Spirit of St. Louis.

A coat of silver paint is to obliterate them all, except one that was carved with a knife on the shock absorber.

Lots of boys looking over the plane before it was locked up copied some of the names.

ENDS ROMANCE TO SAVE HER RIGHT TO FORTUNE

Chicago, July 11 (A.P.).—Marie Kryl, who has only to remain single until she is 30 years old to win $100,000 from her father, Bohumir Kryl, the bandmaster, has ended a romance, says the Herald and Examiner, that threatened to forfeit the proposed fortune.

Miss Kryl herself a pianist of distinction, announced several months ago that she planned to be married to Count Hadji-Kyriacos, a Greek scholar.

"Really," she said then, "it is quite romantic. Already I have bought my trousseau."

But dispatches from Lexington, Ky., where her father is conducting, indicated Miss Kryl had changed her mind.

"I won't say anything about whether I'll marry within the next five years," she was quoted as saying, "but it won't be the count. The man I marry will be an American." The count is now on his way to his country from Europe.

Miss Kryl's sister, Josephine, had the same kind of no-marriage-until-30 agreement with her father. She was released from her promise in 1924, however, to be married to Paul White, a composer.

'WORTH $50' TO BEST GIRL AND BOY FRIEND

Fifty dollars in fines was well spent for the privilege of "bottling up" his best girl and her boy friend, who were parked in an automobile, according to Harry Conrad, twenty-five years old, of Madison street, Malden, who was assessed that amount in Somerville District Court today.

Patrolman William G. Kinley of the Metropolitan district police testified that he was witness to the melee. Conrad was fined $25 for assaulting Miss Catherine Ronis of Spring street, Somerville, and a like amount for "beating up" Paul N. Pitspatrick, her escort.

Conrad told Judge Sturtevant that he felt justified by reason of having kept company with Miss Sonia for two years and because she had stepped out with another while he was away. Judge Sturtevant said:

"Twenty-five dollars on each count," and Conrad replied that it was worth it.

NO U. S. BAR LIKELY ON CANADIAN IMMIGRATION

Montreal, July 11 (A.P.).—Although the general trend in United States immigration matters may be toward tightening the entry rules, there is little chance of Canadians being restricted by a quota in movements across the border, Congressman Milton W. Sreve of Pennsylvania, stated today.

A U. S. subcommittee of which he is the head, after a day spent in traveling the Quebec-Vermont border in an investigation of alien smuggling and other problems.

Story of Love and Intrigue; A Girl Who Kept Her Head and a Tiger Woman

Eddie Wisden, a handsome weakling, and Lady Meldreth, wealthy and socially prominent, are engaged in a clandestine love affair. They plan to marry when Lord Meldreth, the Lady's estranged husband will consent to a divorce. Jill, Eddie's half-sister, is flat broke when a second-rate show closes out of London. Overtaken by storm she seeks refuge in a deserted shack, where the sporting Lord Meldreth finds her unconscious. She wins his high esteem. At home she weaves dreams of happiness. These dreams are shattered when she receives a formal note from his Lordship, acknowledging payment of a loan from him. Jill finds work at Pinaud's, dancing. She is warned against the proprietor, also against Gladys' her girl friend's escort, a wealthy Mr. Watson. Gladys confesses her love for Watson. Eddie confides to his sister the name of his fiancee. Lady Meldreth notifies her lawyers not to proceed with divorce negotiations. Jill quits Pinaud's when the proprietor becomes too familiar. Gladys receives a costly gift from Mr. Watson and keeps it despite Jill's protest. Employment at Hope's antiques shop opens up a new field of endeavor for Jill; she learns that Lord Meldreth is a cherished customer and a frequent visitor there.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"WONDERS will never cease, and I've got a job!" announced Jill to Gladys, as soon as she got back.

Gladys, who was reading a novel, put it down. She was in a strange mood of excitation, which Jill did not immediately notice because she herself was preoccupied with other things. She had been longing for Jill to come in.

"How splendid, Jill!" she said. "And how quick you've been! Whatever is it?"

"You'll never guess. Selling antiques in Bond street," Jill replied.

"But, good gracious, you don't know anything about them, do you?"

"Just a little," answered Jill modestly. "I've been mugging it up in the Museum all the morning, anyway. I must have made a good impression and I'm starting tomorrow. I think I'm going to like it, too."

"And what is the proprietor like? Is he young and good-looking?"

Gladys was always eager to scent a romance.

"Not elderly," Jill informed her. "A nice, comfortable-looking, horn-rimmed gent with cabriole legs. I'm only joking, Gladeyes, dear—talking in terms of old furniture which I've got to get by heart. He's perfectly well behaved and a healthy change from Pinaud. I should say. What have you been doing with yourself all day? Seen your friend?"

"Yes, I had lunch with him." Gladys hesitated. She had an enormous amount to tell Jill, but it was so difficult to begin. Jill didn't give her a lead. She was far from suspecting all that happened in the lunch hour, or how the face of the whole world had been changed for her little friend by ardent words and promises deliberately calculated to make her weak. She was so malleable already—clinging, loving, plastic and far too trustful.

Jill's absence she had written a letter which explained all in case confession failed her eventually. In that case she had made up her mind to leave this nebulous behind and Jill would find it after she had gone.

Meanwhile, there was nearly half

11 BULLETS FLY IN WILD CHASE; 3 CAUGHT

Driving with one hand and firing with the other, then holding the wheel of the rocking car between his knees while reloading, Chief of Police Coleman J. Hogan of Medfield, chased three youths through Medfield to Dedham, West Roxbury and Brookline, early today.

Along the main roads, through dirt roads, over cobblestones, through fields and back again to the roads the wild chase led, with the police chief blazing eleven shots before capturing his trio in Hammond street at the Brookline line.

One of the men taken is held on suspicion of being the youth who, on Saturday, snatched an $830 payroll from Alberta Armstrong in a Kilby street lunchroom, and made his escape through crowded streets.

He name and the name of a second man taken as a suspicious person, are withheld by the police.

The third youth, however, was arraigned, charged with drunkenness, operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, operating in a dangerous manner, and with illegal transportation of liquor.

He is Reginald J. Busch, giving an address in Central street, Framingham. Busch's case was continued to next Monday.

Meanwhile, Miss Armstrong is expected in Medfield with Special Officer Brenahan of the Milk Street Station, in an attempt to identify the wanted chief suspect.

Chief Hogan saw the light coupe containing the three men a couple of hours before dawn. Because the machine was stopped, he went over to question the trio, but he declares they swore at him and drove rapidly away. Then came the chase.

PIERRE MONTEUX TO LEAD LOS ANGELES ORCHESTRA

New York, July 11 (A.P.).—Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Syphony Orchestra, engaged to conduct the Philharmonic Stadium concerts here ster as guest conductor this season, arrived on the Rochambeau today from France. He will proceed to Hollywood, Cal., to lead the Los Angeles orchestra for the Summer "Bowl" concert season.

PONY EXPRESS TAKES LETTER TO COOLIDGE

Rapid City, S. D., July 11.—The boys who used to carry the mail from Omaha to Frisco when the West was nothing but a prairie were back in the saddle today, retracing the old Deadwood trail.

It was the pony express riding again.

Gone, however, were the dangers of the road which beset them in the mad days of the seventies. Gone also the torturous mountain trails, now replaced by the graded, graveled roads of a latter-day civilization.

And in place of the saddle bag crammed full with mail was a single letter.

That letter was an invitation to President Coolidge from the people of Wyoming urging him to visit the State.

Early this morning, Butch Bell rode out of Cheyenne with the Governor's invitation, the first of twenty-seven riders who will span the 259 miles to the Summer White House in the Black Hills. Throughout the night the relay will continue until, at about noon tomorrow, Dakota Clyde Jones, only real cowboy of the presidential entourage, delivers the calfskin upon which the invitation has been burnt.

The best horsemen along the route are carrying Wyoming's bid for a presidential visit. And their mounts are the best specimens of horse flesh that can be assembled.

Governor Emerson and a party of prominent Wyoming citizens are preceding the riders in automobiles and will be on hand at the State game lodge when Jones, astride "Calvin Coolidge," delivers the invitation into the hands of the President.

It is said to relate, however, that outside of color stuff for the movies, little good will come from the gesture. Mr. Coolidge already has indicated he will not venture outside the State of South Dakota during his vacation.

Student Flier Killed

San Antonio, Tex., July 11 (A.P.).—Second Lieutenant William L. Howarth of Harvey, Ill., student in the pursuit section of the advanced flying school, Kelly Field, was killed when his plane crashed on Duncan Field today.

WEATHER MAN NOT SAYING MUCH TODAY

Both storms and waves of good weather played hide and seek today with the local weather man, resulting in his admonition that Greater Boston may expect anything in the next thirty-six hours. Little official hope was held out for an immediate departure of the over-hanging clouds, which prevailed for the sixth successive Sunday.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy and slightly warmer tonight and Tuesday; gentle northeast, shifting to southerly winds.

DENTIST DIES AS HE STARTS ON VACATION

While about to leave his home for a trip to Newfound Lake, N. H., Dr. Lee Ross Pittinger, of No. 1246 Commonwealth avenue, a widely known dentist, was stricken with cerebral hemorrhage, from which he died without regaining consciousness.

Several friends of Dr. Pittinger rode out of Cheyenne with the Governor's invitation, the first of twenty-seven riders who will span the 259 miles to the Summer White House in the Black Hills. Throughout the night the relay will continue until, at about noon tomorrow, Dakota Clyde Jones, only real cowboy of the presidential entourage, delivers the calfskin upon which the invitation has been burnt.

It is said to relate, however, that outside of color stuff for the movies, little good will come from the gesture. Mr. Coolidge already has indicated he will not venture outside the State of South Dakota during his vacation.

THIRTY-EIGHT HURT IN RIOT AT BOMBAY

Bombay, July 11 (A.P.).—A critical situation has been created at Kolhapur as the result of a riot between Moslems and Hindus, during which thirty-three Moslems and five Hindus were injured.

The trouble started when a Moslem procession in connection with religious celebrations forced its way through a Hindu religious procession. The mob was controlled without resort to firearms, but the intercommunal tension is acute.

BROCKTON MAN HURT AS CAR IS CROWDED OFF ROAD

Whitman, July 11.—Peter H. Chesnut of No. 153 Ames street, Brockton, is in Brockton Hospital suffering from injuries suffered in a motor car accident on Franklin street, Chesnut and his wife and three children were driving toward Hanson, when a machine operated by Mikadon Mierkims of Burton street, Campello, attempted to pass. Another machine coming from the opposite direction blocked the way, and the Brockton car was crowded into a telephone pole.

30 FLEE BLAZE AT BEACH

Plymouth, July 11.—Thirty cottagers were driven from their homes and the entire White Horse Beach Summer colony was threatened with destruction by a fire that destroyed two homes and a garage, and damaged four other residences.

Thomas Shaw, a fireman, was overcome by smoke.

Believed to have started from an open fireplace in which a fire had been kindled as a result of the chill east wind and fog, the flames in a few minutes had made one cottage a great torch and the wind scattered the burning brands to nearby buildings. While help was coming from nearby communities the beach colony turned into a bucket brigade, women assisting. It was only by dint of the bravest fighting that the flames were finally brought under control.

FORMER LEADER OF ORCHESTRA A SUICIDE

New York, July 11.—A suicide by poisoning David Montagnon, Yale Graduate and former director of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, ended by his own hand a career which had taken him on musical concert tours all over the world and through the United States on a tour with Mme. Melba. His body was identified at the morgue here by one of three women, said to be relatives, who made their home with him.

THIEVES BREAK INTO CHURCH; STEAL MONEY

Thieves used false keys to break into the office of the First Methodist Episcopal Church at Lynn some time between Friday and Sunday morning, and left the pastor's study in great disorder, after stealing some money from a small bank which they broke open. The Rev. Edson R. Leach, pastor of the church, discovered the robbery when he entered the building for the morning service.

"UP TO YOU!" NEW CHIEF TELLS MEN

Washington, July 11 (A.P.).—Prohibition administrators gathered here from all parts of the country were told today by Seymour Lowman, who, as assistant Secretary of the Treasury, is to be their new chief, that responsibility for dry law enforcement was squarely upon their shoulders, and that he wanted business-like efficient work.

Salad for a Party That Is Different

Sometimes for "pass-around" tea on Sunday, or for a small dance for the older children, or as a middle course at lu...heon or dinner, one wants a dainty salad that is different. Here is one light enough to form a link between the meat and dessert course, yet substantial enough to constitute the main dish at a light meal. Lay a slice of canned Ha...aian pineapple on romaine or lettuce leaves. Heap on each mixture of chopped celery, diced apple, and whipped cream mayonnaise. Decorate with nuts and maraschino cherries.

Plenty of Recipes

"WHAT I can do with a package of flavored gelatine powder?" must have been the slogan in the Martha Lee Kitchen last week, for each day something new and duly delicious in jelled desserts appeared as by magic from the electric refrigerator for the sampling and impartial comments of guests.

While there were several stars in the jelly firmament the chief constellation seemed to be a jelled fruit macedoine which would be equally appropriate as a dessert or a salad, according to the dressing served with it.

The macedoine was simplicity itself to make, once the materials were assembled. Almost any preserved, canned, fresh or candied fruits may be used, or a collection of left over vegetables if the macedoine is to serve as a salad. We diced a canned pear, a peach, a few apricots and some cherries.

Meanwhile we had dissolved a package of lemon gelatine powder in a cup of boiling water, added a cup of cold water and set the mixture in the ice chest to cool. Just as the jelly begins to thicken, the diced fruit is very thoroughly stirred in and the macedoine returned to the chest to "set." Turned out onto a bed of crisp lettuce, it is completed with this unusually delicious dressing.

FRUIT SALAD DRESSING—Mix ¾ cup canned pineapple juice with ¼ cup of orange juice and the juice of half a lemon. Bring to a boil. Combine ¼ cup of sugar and 1 tbsp. flour and moisten with 3 tbsps. cold water. Add 1 egg, well beaten. Stir this mixture gradually into the hot fruit juice and cook until thickened. When cold, stir in lightly a half cup of whipped cream.

This dressing is of course for the macedoine served as a salad; as a dessert, whipped cream slightly sweetened and flavored with vanilla is the best topping. If you could have heard the enthusiastic praises of this dressing, sung by our visitors last week, you would clip the recipe out NOW and try it not later than tomorrow!

There's a combination of raspberry jam and whipped cream that I know you won't want to miss—not to mention the Paradise Pudding, an Imperial Salad and a luscious mint jelly to serve with cold meats. Freely yours on request, of course.

Thirst Time Is Here

SUMMER time is thirsty time—the time when the little folks in particular want less to eat, more to drink—and the time when it is most important to provide something that acceptably combines both food and drink. Yes, of course you've guessed that this is Milk—with a capital M.

Have you ever noticed that even children who do not especially care for milk at home will eagerly drink milk shakes at the soda fountain, thinking of it as a soda? Why not give homemade milk drinks the same professional atmosphere by investing in an aluminum shaker, and adding to the milk to be shaken therein just enough sugar and pure vanilla extract to make it a real taste teaser as well as a food and drink combined? Serve this drink ice cold—preferably poured over a third of a glass of cracked ice, and let the kiddies sip it through straws in true drug store style.

Just that level teaspoonful of sugar and a half teaspoonful of pure vanilla added to each glass of milk makes all the difference, adding a delicious flavor to the nutritive properties of plain milk.

"Ann is going to get married!"

"YES! She's engaged to a nice boy. He's not making a big salary yet, but he's a hard worker. They'll have to be careful of their money at first!"

Careful of their money! With a home to find, furniture to buy, marketing to learn . . . with the thousand and one little emergencies to meet that newly-weds never dream of! . . .

And a young girl, inexperienced in these practical problems, is expected to be careful of her money!

Ann will bless advertising. In the pages of her magazines and newspapers, she will find the very experience she lacks—the advice she needs!

It is when every penny counts that advertising gives its best service. The advertisements you read are valuable lessons in everyday economy. They help, as nothing else can, to make your dollar go the longest distance. For advertisements show you which article, at the price you are willing to pay, is going to suit you best. And the very fact that it is advertised is its guarantee that it will give you satisfaction after you have bought it.

The advertisements in this newspaper are a most valuable guide to wise buying. It pays to read them regularly

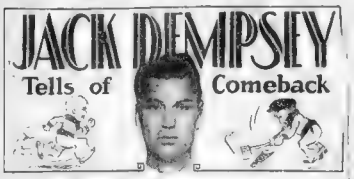
JACK DEMPSEY Tells of Comeback



SARATOGA, N. Y., July 11.—Whenever I take a life-sized look at Jack Sharkey's record, I figure I can go into the ring on the night of the 21st without doing an awful lot of worrying over the prospect of being bumped off by the sailor boy from Boston.

In treating jaw blows, as shown above, stand at head of patient, hook the thumb about the jaw with index finger over the junction of the joint near ear. While mouth is wide open force is exerted, thus reducing slight dislocation of the jaw. If blow is extended at side of jaw, move chin upward and downward stimulating the nerve to come to the surface. Dr. Resnick, famous Hub osteopath, says his system can restore a badly battered boxer to normal in one minute.

Bobby Jones Fails to Play Up to Old Form

By O. B. KEELER

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 11 (A.P.)—Angus, the son of Fergus, who is reputed to have founded St. Andrews' Golf Club, must have turned at least one somersault in his vaulted tomb before the first day's play was done in the 36-hole qualifying test for the British open championship. Scores above 80 were the rule at noon.

"I had to pull the rope at the unveiling of a statue of my reverend ancestor at Valley Forge," said Mr. Bobby. "I pulled the wrong rope and the tent came down on my head."

For blows to solar plexus—Place patient flat on back, with doctor's knee underneath. Place other hand upon the skin over the plexus and at the same time spring upward on the knee and down on the area maintaining pressure for one minute. Nerves can be restored back to normal if treatment is applied immediately.

For rib injury—Find out exactly the nature of the blow and the relation to the other parts. Many times, ribs are pushed down ward, inward or forward. Exactly locate ribs, standing back of patient, place fingers on the affected ribs, and then lift back to the normal position.

When he finds out WHICH of these Four she has the MOST of, he can then DRAW INTEREST. Though he should, Of course, enlarge it first.

A WOMAN also can BANK on certain Things with a MAN. All men Have Either Their CHIVALRY Their PASSION. Their WORD Or their VANITY (The last is safe.)

The TRAGEDY of life is when WOMEN Bank on things that are NOT THERE. The Humor is to imagine one man has all They WANT. PRINCIPLE is the thing that COUNTS.

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

CHAPTER LII

ROBIN stood at the baby's crib lost in a wonder. It was smiling at her—really looking at her and smiling.

And this morning its fingers had closed over hers. It had looked up and smiled and made a long, happy cooing sound. All day she wanted to hear a repetition of the marvelous utterance.

She went to the window and looked into the backyard. Spring here—new flowers pushing out their buds—young, tender green showing. All of life regenerating itself in joy and beauty.

Robin looked and felt a pulsing in her heart—a goodness, not unlike, that she felt so often in Peter. It sent her back to the crib to kiss the baby, to kiss the back of its soft, fat little neck.

She could stay on indefinitely in the West. Adele as a matter of fact wanted some business interest and a home in Los Angeles.

Jacaranda letters troubled her as much as Mona's.

Months ago she wrote Ella to Jackson Grey. Mr. Jackson had not come to Chicago. Ella, in charge of the branch here and on the way to becoming a big business woman herself, if she knew how, if she had the proper capital. Ella got a boost from Robin's letter. A NICE GIRL WOULDN'T

By I. R. Hegel

"F[illegible] From Luther Oglethorpe's private [illegible] tion. If there were any men she admired, it was certainly these big, bronzed Westerners. "Has he a ranch?"

"A cattle ranch, I dare say," responded Miss Truffles dryly. "He's one of the wealthiest men in Montana." She folded another long document, her lips pressed in a straight, prim line. "On his visits here, Miss Oglethorpe has always entertained him and introduced him to the season's debutantes. This time, too, she'd arranged quite a few festivities to be held in his honor. But when he got here he married some nondescript Western girl, and had to change all our plans."

"Married to Lord Salton! It was the biggest news one had gotten for a while. A hundred-pound hammer blow!

"That's what Miss Oglethorpe said," returned Miss Truffles. "And I don't blame her. Miss Lord! You've been at it for almost half an hour."

Dazed, Sylvia resumed her typing but the face of Ted Stuart seemed constantly to stand before her. She thought about him all morning, and, at noon, when Miss Truffles went off to lunch and she was alone in the office, she also thought about him.

"To be married, that man, oh, what a shame. I'll bet," giving the waste basket a vicious kick, "that his wife is one of those leather-[illegible]

THE WITTY SAYINGS OF MEDBURY

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

A WELL known judge is sort of fostering a movement for trial marriages. This may be all right, but what we need is a man who can tell us how to take the trials out of marriage.

WEDLOCK would be a fine thing if it could be put on a friendly basis.

IT'S the only union in the country with long hours.

ONE guy says he's sorry he went to the altar. It's the only time he ever got into trouble by going to church.

HE was having a beautiful romance and then the minister busted it up.

HE said they couldn't have battled any harder if they'd been married by Tex Rickard.

THE way his wife nagged him you'd have thought they were spending their honeymoon in Madison Square Garden.

A WOMAN never knows a man until she marries him, and then she wishes she'd never known him.

ONE girl claimed their marriage was incompatible because her husband wouldn't do what she told him.

HE wanted the joys of a benedict with all the privileges of a bachelor.

SHE said he gave her nothing but chicken-feed and then kicked when he was hen-pecked.

SHE claims that matrimony is a poison and divorce is the antidote.

SHE doesn't know much about automobiles, but she's walked home twice from the altar.

LOVE is the matrimonial bark and alimony is the life belt.

TRIAL marriages would never be a success in America when you can get so much cheaper trials in Mexico and Paris.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

A MAN is as old as he feels—but a woman is as old as her husband MAKES her feel.

He can make her feel like a kitten—or like "an old horse that ought to be shot."

* * *

Just the look in his eyes can make her feel "cute" and irresistible, or foolish and passe.

* * *

He can make her feel smart, clever and altogether desirable—or shop-worn and out of date.

* * *

She sees herself in his eyes as in a full-length mirror; and he can cover her with a flattering reflection of admiration or turn upon her a searchlight and cover her with contempt and an inferiority complex.

* * *

The attention and devotion of other men may make her feel young and alluring for an evening. But her husband can "take it all OUT of her," with a word or a glance, when they get home.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

The Boston Evening American will pay $1 for "Best Joke" published. Address "Best Joke," Boston Evening American.

New assistant to manager of drug store—Hey, John, what's in this bottle?

Manager—Oh, that's the stuff we use when we can't read the prescription. EVELYN ROOKIE, 41 Rockhill street, Dorchester.

Or, if other men have been inattentive and neglectful, her husband can "make it all up to her" and re-establish her faith in her perennial charms, with just a few words and a tender kiss.

Men are different. A woman may be able to make her husband feel de trop, awkward, ashamed, stupid, confused or even altogether wrong—but she can never make him feel OLD. Only his arteries can do that!

* * *

But a woman's arteries may be as good as new and her age nothing to lie about; yet with a simple twist of the corner of his smile, a mere dash of criticism or sarcasm, or a cold indifferent gl- , he can make her feel like Methuselah.

* * *

Alas, it's SO hard to penetrate a man's self-complacency. It sustains him through his middle-age, his Indian Summer and even his tottering twilight.

But a woman's vanity is a fragile flower, which is kept alive only by the tenderest care and ministrations of the adoring male.

* * *

In other words, a man can make his wife feel like a charming "spotted child" or like a "spoiled" piece of fruit, ready for the discard.

What Do You Say?

I think conditions are at least 100 per cent. worse since the (wavelength) change. I heartily agree with F. F. of Portsmouth, N. H. Formerly I used to listen to stations all over the country with my GOOD SET, but with the present condition of things, it is only so much junk. WHBM (Chicago) was one of my favorite stations before the change. Now it is impossible to get clear reception from him. I hope that there will be some change soon.

For the Notebook

Keep all tube contacts clean and bright.

Never use a low resistance meter to test batteries.

A very sensitive set is one using radio frequency and regeneration.

Dirt anywhere in the connections will reduce the efficiency of a receiver.

Remember to disconnect the trickle charger before going away on a vacation.

Signals that are too weak for the loud speaker may be heard on the headphones.

Tubes should not be burned so bright on the short wave length as on the long ones.

Discard "B" batteries when the voltage has dropped one-third, or when a 45-volt battery registers only 30 volts.

"Undigested Securities" Appear; Business Spotty

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, July 11.—Speculators continue to send their favorites higher on the New York Stock Exchange. Industry and business, however, are not keeping pace with the stock market.

"How much longer the speculative jamboree can be maintained, even should money remain easy, has become a acutely discussed question, particularly since a very unpleasant chance has overtaken the bond market. Until recently hen offerings of securities were usually absorbed readily. Indigestion lately set in. Investment bankers admit that unplaced bonds have mounted to awkward figures and that it will take some time to clear shelves.

B. C. Forbes

THIS IS NOT astonishing in view of the absolutely unprecedented outpouring of new securities this year. Bond issues alone have reached $3,650,000,000, an increase of fully one billion over a year ago. The Department of Commerce reports that last quarter's offerings of foreign securities broke all records, bringing the total for the six months to $788,000,000. Advantage, moreover, has been freely taken of the high quotations for stocks to bring out an unusually large number of stock issues.

The late J. P. Morgan once attributed the collapse of a speculative boom to "undigested securities." It would be well to follow closely this phase of the present situation. Unless care be exercised not to aggravate the congestion, trouble may be precipitated.

BROKERS' LOANS have risen to a higher total than ever recorded. Wall Street's bulls ignored this news. And they were able to point to a recession in call money rates, rather than an advance, after publication of the figures.

In my opinion there is little occasion to become alarmed over monetary prospects. The Federal Reserve banks are carrying better than 76 per cent. of reserves against deposits and Federal Reserve notes combined, a ratio higher than a year ago. Bank students point out that, if the day should by and by arrive the present method of figuring could be changed to make the reserve look much more impressive.

If the conferences which have been going on secretly are not among heads of the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Reichsbank and the Federal Reserve Bank of New York have any practical outcome, it unquestionably will take the form of reducing the rate of expanding America's stock of gold. Even on there is scant likelihood of any drastic stiffening of money rates in this country in the near future. Moderate firmness will be logical by the Fall.

* * *

THE STOCK market boom, in my judgment, may have more to fear from developments outside of the money markets.

In view of the daily outpouring of optimistic forecasts, it may not be amiss to make note of such facts as these:

Railway profits as well as volume of traffic have lately diminished somewhat. Building operations have contracted appreciably. Pig iron and steel production are being curtailed—the steel corporation is reported to be operating at only 55 per cent. of capacity for the present. Automobile production has fallen off 10 per cent. from last year. Retail trade is quite spotty; increase in sales reported by many stores represent additions to the number of stores rather than additional sales in old stores.

Failures during the last six months rose to 12,382 from 11,476 in the first half of 1926 and indebtedness exceeded $230,000,000 against less than $210,000,000 a year ago. Only twice has this year's failure total been exceeded and only three times have liabilities been larger. Dun's notes.

The Department of Commerce finds that wholesale prices have touched the lowest point in recent years. In general price index stands only 35 per cent. above the pre-war level. Yet, mirabile dictu, we are still wallowing in ruinous overproduction. Men have become somewhat more plentiful than jobs in not a few centres. The electric industry has somewhat fewer unfilled orders on hand than a year ago.

OF COURSE Summer quietness may account for no apprehension—it is normal rather than abnormal. Whether the predicted substantial recovery in the Fall will materialize cannot be definitely foretold. Apparently stock market operators are confident it will.

OIL PRODUCTION SETS ANOTHER HIGH RECORD

Oil production has smashed another high record. The Brookmire Economic Service, Inc., states, having reached the new peak of 2,519,000 barrels a day in the latest week for which figures are available. This is an increase of 25 per cent. over the same week last year, although we are now in the midst of a peak period of consumption, and the rate of production is actually above requirements as is shown by the fact that exports estimate that total demand, after deducting imports, will only reach 2,478,000 barrels a day. Large reserves and the difficulty of curtailing production will probably result in further price declines.

State Street Notes

BUSH Terminal should show about $2.75 a common share for first half year.

INCOME tax collections for fiscal year ended June 30 were $2,219,-811,014, increase over 1926, of $245,726,873 over 1926 fiscal year.

IT is understood Remington Rand, Inc., will pay for Kalamazoo assets with 7 per cent. first preferred stock.

SENATOR Smoot fixes at $300,000,-000 reduction in nation's annual income tax which will be permitted by decrease in tax levies.

CALIFORNIA crude oil production in week ended July 9 averaged 524,200 barrels daily, decline of 5,300 daily from preceding week.

Cotton Is Higher

New York cotton futures were higher today. Prices: July 17.17, up .08; October 17.45, up .09; December 17.63, up .05.

New York Curb

New York Curb prices were mixed today. Bancitaly 122¾, off ⅝; Vacuum Oil, par; Indiana Pipe Line 79¼, up ¼; Ford of Canada, 498, off 2.

UNIFICATION
NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY
AND
GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY AND GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY:

Applications for authority to take the steps necessary to carry out the Unification Plan were filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission on July 8, 1927, and it is expected that hearings thereon will commence shortly after the middle of September.

Copies of the proposed leases from Northern Pacific Railway Company, Great Northern Railway Company and Spokane, Portland and Seattle Railway Company, formerly, to the New Company as filed with the Commission may be obtained at the offices of the Depositaries and of Northern Pacific Railway Company and Great Northern Railway Company.

Deposits of stock will be received by the Depositaries until further notice. Those who have not deposited their shares are requested to do so promptly.

Certificates of deposit, listed on the New York Stock Exchange, will be issued for all stock deposited under the Plan. All dividends collected on deposited stock will be paid to the holders of record of certificates of deposit representing such stock.

All deposits of stock will be without expense to depositors.

OAK FLOORING IS ADVANCED BY FLOOD

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

One effect of the Mississippi flood has been to cause a sudden advance in the price of oak lumber, used chiefly in flooring, I am told. Prices have nearly doubled in the past few weeks. New England dealers who were carrying large supplies on hand when the flood came have profited by profits sizable in some cases run into many thousands of dollars, it is stated that about two-thirds of the total United States area producing timber for this sort of lumber has been inundated.

Wall Street writer says: "To the Wayside Inn, Henry Ford has come for his early American atmosphere and now he is surrounded by wigwams and relics of another day, he has created a true Colonial home. This is one of his favorite haunts to seek rest from the task of managing perhaps the world's greatest industry. Here he has come to live and work for another of this region's well-known products, Wamsutta percale sheets and pillow cases. For F. & H. with Wamsutta products that Ford is outfitting his new special raircar for the Detroit plane. This is another bright feather in the cap of Wamsutta Mills, one of the oldest of New England's large cotton mills. 'Good buying' of Wamsutta products has come from another quarter, too, for Hon. "BEAU GESTE" RETURNS; ON BILL AT FENWAY

"Beau Geste," a gripping film presentation of Percival Wren's famous story, becomes the week's attraction at the up town Fenway. Few pictures have ever so thoroughly pleased picture fans as this story of the French Foreign Legion in Africa. Action lingers on the inspiring devotion of three young Englishmen, each of whom leaves home in order that the blame for the theft of a famous sapphire may fall on him, although believing one of his brothers guilty.

By common impulse the three that moment the picture is crowded with drama of the most compelling kind. In the principal roles are Ronald Colman, Neil Hamilton and Ralph Forbes, as the three English boys, Noah Beery presents a magnificent character as "the cruelest man and bravest soldier," in the Legion, while other roles are taken by Mary Brian, Alice Joyce and Norman Trevor.

Most of the scenes are represented on the burning sands of Sahara and are tonped off with a furious battle between the Legion and an attacking horde of Arabs.

FORD GETS HIS REAL KICK OUT OF HARD WORK

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Copyright, 1927, by Int'l News Service

Detroit, July 11.—Henry Ford, the richest man in the world, the best known and the least understood, revealed many of his innermost thoughts on intimate beliefs to International News Service.

The world's first billionaire—

Could refrain from ever lifting a finger, but gets the most pleasure by working.

Could stay in bed all day, yet is satisfied with six hours of sleep.

Believes the greatest use of his wealth was the increased work it enabled him to do.

Stays hungry and keep his appetite on edge, yet has no favorite dish.

LIKES TO BE FIRST.

Could live a life of luxurious ease, but would refrain from ever ten to sixteen hours a day.

Employs 200,000 men and likes to be the first down to work in the morning.

Owns thousands of motor cars, yet likes walking as a recreation.

The possession of the greatest single fortune in the whole world's history, the royal throne of motordom and the leadership of a hundred other industries does not give Ford no special satisfaction.

"How does it feel to be the richest man in the world?" he was asked.

"I only feel I have a job," Ford replied.

"What was the greatest gift your wealth brought to you?"

"Just the chance to work at," the richest man said.

"What have you lost by being the richest man in the world?"

"Not a thing."

"Not even privacy, personal freedom or the opportunity to mix with people?"

"No, not a thing," Ford reiterated. "I get around all right."

"What do you enjoy most in life?"

"Having something to do, something to work at," the richest man answered, without hesitation. "I like to work."

Then he smiled and added: "I like to be up-to-date as I can."

It is aviation that gives Ford the "greatest thrill" he gets out of life. The huge multi-motored plane and his pet sengered air cruisers, with which he some day hopes to establish transcontinental air lines have displaced the flivvers as his first love.

WILL FLY HIMSELF.

"The greatest thrill!" he responded to the question. "Why, I get more thrill out of watching the skill that has to develop our large planes than anything else I've done about."

"Hovering to develop" means experimenting upon engines, plane bodies and other mechanical problems.

The auto king, who still celebrates his sixty-fourth birthday on July 30 is in the best health and strength of a man half his age. His secret of good health is simple. He frequently takes long walks across the countryside near his Dearborn estate and thrills at seeing the old fashioned dances at his huge Dearborn estate. Yesterday, walking is his chief recreation.

"How do you account for your exceptional health?" Ford was asked.

"I keep busy all the time," Ford replied. "Moderation. I never eat too much and I keep my mind occupied."

"What would you advise other men of your age to live in order to share your good health?"

"I can't," he answered. "No two men are alike. Just try to keep up to date and keep busy and be a little longer but usually it is six or less. I get up early in the morning but cause I like to."

The richest man has no favorite dishes nor favorite menus. He eats anything that would appeal to the normal appetite.

"What is your favorite dish?" he was asked, just after he ate a lunch that included roast lamb, boiled potatoes, spinach, carrots, blueberry pie and coffee.

"I have none," he retorted, and added, with a smile, "The favorite food is best if you're hungry. I work enough to keep hungry and that always gives me a good appetite."

APPROVES EARLY MARRIAGES.

The man who rose from poverty to multimillions in three decades, has very definite ideas about how Young America can succeed in life or business.

"Do you advise young men to marry young?" he was asked.

"I certainly do," Ford responded. "And they should get families. It gives them more experience and builds character. Domestic happiness."

"Do you believe the young man on the farm should go to the city to seek his future?"

"There is no need for young men to leave the farms and villages," Ford replied. "Today, work and opportunity are plentiful in the small towns and villages. The modern idea is to take work to the men; not the men to the work as used to be. I feel village life in America is worth preserving and that has been the plan of the Ford company—to take work to the people. That is why we have assembly plants in many little villages and towns.

"Should the city youth go into business for himself or can he get ahead best by going into some corporation?"

"There is no need for the city youth to go into the corporations. Perhaps there are greater," Ford declared. "There is more spread for his powers. He should go into business for years of experiments as in attempting to run a business by himself. The corporation has tried out all the experiments and has his job all ready for him. And there is always room at the top for bright young men."

And to the young business man, the world's greatest business man offered this parting shot of advice: "If a young man is in business and is wise, he will pay less attention to those who flatter his self-esteem and more to those who stir his energies."

There was one more question. It was, "How soon do you plan to retire from business?" but Ford did not answer. As he glided away with an agility that belied his years, one of his intimate friends replied: "Never. Mr. Ford will always

RADIO DIALOG
By WILLIAM RANDLE

TALK about "progressiveness."

These radio stations are always sending us publicity to publish so the public will know how great they are. And yet they have just stumbled on the idea of having two announcers at the coming big Dempsey-Sharkey fight.

* * *

Heretofore each great pugilistic affair has been described by one large announcer. Not that they are going to have smaller announcers. On no, some announcers are too small now.

The Dempsey-Sharkey affair will be handled by both Graham McNamee and Phillips Carlin.

In case it rains, the two announcers will hold their own argument. If McNamee incorrectly describes a left jab to Dempsey when it should be a hook, clinch, or blow, Carlin will correct McNamee. Then we will hear the real battle start.

* * *

Carrying this idea a little further, why not let two women announce the combat. On second thought, Hmm, on withdraw the expression. The microphones might become overheated.

The real reason for having two announcers is not given. But suspecting that when the radio broadcaster becomes generous something is decidedly wrong, we investigated. It was just as we thought. As soon as McNamee heard that Dempsey and Sharkey would charge $3 a seat for the orchestra Mac thought sit getting in on his radio reputation.

* * *

The only flaw in the ointment was that Carlin thought up the same idea simulta

MOUTH ON MAIDEN TRIP TO NOVA SCOTIA

To the shrill blast of sirens from harbor craft the palatial Yarmouth of the Boston and Yarmouth Steamship Co., Ltd., left her berth at Central wharf with a capacity list on her maiden voyage to Yarmouth, N. S., Captain Frank L. Crosby, formerly skipper of the S. S. Northland, was in command.

President Calvin Austin of the company had about 50 guests aboard the steamer. The party will be received at the end of the voyage by the town fathers at Yarmouth.

SON-IN-LAW HELD IN PITTSFIELD STABBING

Pittsfield, July 11.—Antonio Parisi was fatally wounded in a stabbing affray on the veranda of his home here. His son-in-law, John Paulino, 29, was arrested several hours later and taken to police headquarters for questioning. The police said Paulino was found hiding in some bushes near the house and that a knife resolver were discovered near the scene.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE ☆ ☆ BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN ☆ ☆ BOSTON JULY 11, 1927

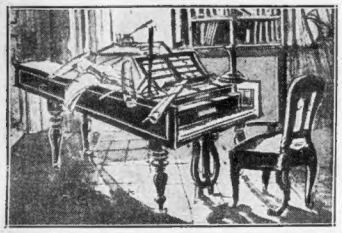
THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND: 1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

Genius Often Lacks Order

But, Young People, You Should Imitate the Genius, Not the Disorder



THE GREAT BEETHOVEN'S WORKROOM

This picture, made from a drawing now in the Vienna municipal collection, shows the workroom in which Beethoven worked on the Ninth Symphony. The rest of the room is as disorderly as the piano, books scattered about, nothing in order.

Music, inkwell, rolls of paper are piled on the piano, and under those conditions Beethoven produced such magnificent compositions as will outlive buildings of stone and iron, the great pyramids themselves.

But, dear young gentlemen and ladies studying music, advertising, salesmanship or anything else, be careful that you IMITATE THE GENIUS AND NOT THE DISORDER.

Remember that he amounts to little who possesses only "the contortions of the sybil, not the inspiration."

Genius is disorderly, SOME times, scatters things around occasionally, quite often, writes a careless handwriting, and is careless in personal appearance. But remember that genius is great, IN SPITE of disorder, not BECAUSE of disorder.

Beethoven's disorder was the curse of his life, the cause, undoubtedly, of much unhappiness that darkened his later years.

BEETHOVEN AND THE LAST DESCENDANT OF HIS FAMILY

These pictures show Beethoven, with genius so great and life so unhappy. His name has disappeared from the earth. The last of the name, Karl van Beethoven, died five years ago. The pretty face above is that of Karl van Beethoven's great-granddaughter, Niddy Impekoven.

She lives, is happy, healthy, and if you have a little imagination, you can imagine that you see in her wide and high forehead something of the blood that she inherits from the ancient Beethoven strain. May she marry a worthy man and revive the family greatness.

At this moment she is a dancer, and much admired as she dances to the music of her great relative.

Young gentlemen, be orderly and you will be happy, and order will NOT interfere with your genius, if you have any.

Tycho Brae was a genius, he dressed himself most beautifully, with lace cuffs, when he went "into the presence of My Maker" to study the stars.

The great Buffon was a genius, he dressed most beautifully, worked methodically, with a marvelously fine hand writing. Voltaire, a very great genius, was most particular about his dress, about his Polish boots with fur at the top. He was orderly, able to make and leave a fortune, while destroying much cruelty and brutal superstition.

The GREATEST success combines ORDER AND ABILITY.

"See the Other World"

General Mitchell's Suggestion

General William Mitchell was put out of the Government flying service because he told truths unpleasant to those that make profit out of battleships, and is now fortunately free to speak his mind without asking permission of battleship builders or Cabinet members.

He suggests that the saying "Join the Navy and See the World" should be changed to "Join the Naval Aviation and See the Next World."

This Government may not be rich enough to make its flying fleet ADEQUATE, but it might at least make it SAFE.

The army and navy of the world's richest country, and all the power and wealth of the Government behind them, ought not to leave it to a St. Louis boy to show that an American machine can fly across the Atlantic Ocean.

IT NEVER PAYS TO GIVE UP TRYING

By DR. FRANK CRANE

BECAUSE something has happened to you which interferes with your efficiency is no proof that all is lost. There is nothing unconquerable to the human spirit.

There is no truer saying than, "Where there is life there is hope."

The great problem is to utilize what remains of your life and keep up a bold front.

It never pays to give up.

Life is like a coin stamped on both sides. On one side is the face of smiling fortune, on the other the image of frowning reverses. Sometimes one side lies up and sometimes the other, and sometimes the two seem to spin, alternating continually. But the two are always there in every life, side by side.

So one-half of the art of life is knowing how to meet misfortune and the other half understanding how to treat prosperity.

The newspapers, as they mirror life from day to day, give few more inspiring items than the ones which concern those who show the steel of character when the shadow of discouragement and disaster passes over them.

Near Lincoln, Nebraska, a nineteen-year-old boy named Edward Smith lost both his arms in an accident when he was helping shuck corn on his father's farm.

With that accident most of the means of earning a living open to him the day before were obliterated. There were few things that he could do. Yet one of these he did superlatively well.

Providing himself with artificial arms, he became a salesman for a Kansas City manufacturer. Later he was sent to Europe to open a branch factory. He became a success in spite of a well-nigh insurmountable handicap.

In New Buffalo, Michigan, on the shore of Lake Michigan, lives Joe Jones. From childhood he has had a crippled leg, with one ankle that is stiff and without feeling. Yet he has saved five people from drowning at the beaches near his home.

For nineteen years Magdalen Beans of Pittsburgh has been confined to one room with a nerve centre in her neck deranged so the slightest movement causes agony. During this time she has written stories and poems that have been widely published and have given robust people enjoyment and encouragement.

Such items bring strength for meeting our own troubles and enlarge our respect for the spirit of human nature.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

IN a window of a large clothing store is a sign upon which Chinese characters are inscribed. Feeling certain the wording was not grammatically correct we asked H. C. JACOBS of the store. Although we suspect BeeCee wrote the "ad," he modestly refused confirmation, but added that it brought many Chinese customers into the store.

Out along the BACK BAY banks of the CHARLES were hundreds of evening cars. The river was hot. The air was sultry. Groups of young men and girls strolled along. A sheik in a 1921 flivver painted like a circus . . . But it was all paid for, $50. Another sheik in a six-cylinder sedan also shining with paint and $50, too—first installment. Hotels trying to pick up girls . . . Hot traffic police . . . .

Newbury at seven o'clock the same evening . . . A deserted street . . . Light dimly shining from a laundry. Windows boarded up . . . An art shop with some pottery . . . Then a "home restaurant" . . . Too quiet.

Earlier in the day we watched the police patrol capture the COMMON. Pickers and choosers were the officers, for they carefully selected a few sleepers on the grass and gave them a ride. Our observation was that those loungers who wore good clothes were not molested, except when the officer sometimes tapped a heel or two.

The moral seems to be: When visiting the Common or Public Garden wear your best suit.

* * *

Twice we had to go into a large Washington street store looking for some particular article of clothing. What it was we do not remember. It might have been a particular tie or a sport suit. The store employs a couple of thousand men and women. Yet on both occasions our clerk told us that no, he was very sorry but HE did not have the article, HE was all out of it at present, HE etc.

Yet Lindbergh uses the "we" in his story of the great transatlantic flight.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE flowers of the Mother Lode—They breathe a story which the pages of our histories have never told, a story of love and courage and sacrifice which should make that place sacred forever to American hearts.

"The Mother Lode!" Men went crazy at that name in 1849. Over the plains they raced in their covered wagons—daring Indian and wolf, pestilence, famine, draught, the hell of heat, the bitterer hell of cold. Over the seas, too, they flew—from England and China, from far Brazil and Peru—the men who were to people the west for America. And always through their night blazed the beacon of gold—always in their thoughts ran the hope of gold, like a fiery drug, stirring them, soothing them.

Yes, they had their drug and their beacon, those gold mad men. But how about the women who came with them—the quiet, staunch women from Maine and New Hampshire, the gentle, stately women from old Virginia, the soft-eyed, brooding wives and mothers from Peru, and the wistful little women of China, the tall, proud daughters of England? What could they ever find that would be half as precious as those dear homes they left behind? And yet, they followed after their men and gave to us that proud and prosperous West we know today.

The little homesick pioneer mothers of America—how often we forget them in our celebrations. We are so taken with all the fierce and noisy deeds that we forget the tremendous gifts of those who did their gentle deeds in silence and in tears.

But the Mother Lode does not forget. The miner and the gambler have gone away—the wild doves nest in the fireplaces of the abandoned shacks, and rattlesnakes draw their bloated, spangled shapes across the grass-grown sills. But still the story of those homesick wives lives on. There, in sweet miles of flowers, their story buds and blooms—the flowers from those seeds they brought "from home" so long ago.

Down in the empty gullies you find them, where the placer gold once lay—breathing some lonely grave by the coyote's trail—webbing their bloom across a rotting mining shaft—spraying their petals on some crumbling floor. Those small, sweet Persian roses, as bright as living gold that once grew on some stone wall in Vermont. Hollyhocks—straight as Puritans—flag lilies, blue and white, standing in grim rows beside the old fandango hall. A mass of herbs that still smell of Peru—a strange, exotic tree from Sicily—lilies from China—and a row of phlox some homesick girl from Sussex planted on a lane—

The hands that planted them are long since dead—such weary hands, when they at last lay still. But that which those hands wrought goes on and on.

Our wilderness was watered by their tears—

Our rocks were covered by their wreathes of roses—

Our gambling halls were hedged with their sweet faith—

Their herbs still soothe and sweeten our mad dream of gold.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Is Love a lie, and fame indeed a breath
And is there no sure thing in life—but death?
—Le Gallienne.

Take from the learned the pleasure of making their learning heard, and their learning will be worth nothing to them. —Rousseau.

The man who never alters his opinion is like standing water, and breeds reptiles of the mind.
—Blake.

Blind times do shift—each thing his turn does hold;
New things succeed, as former things grow old.
—Robert Herrick.

There is now a fiercer hell than the failure in a great object.—Keats.

The better day, the better deed.
The worst comes to the worst.
'Tis slight, not strength, that gives the greatest lift.
—Thomas Middleton.

The power least prized is that which thinks and feels.
—Wordsworth.
